Differentiating and defining 'exposed' and 'offshore' aquaculture and implications for aquaculture operation, management, costs, and policy Tyler Sclodnick, Kevin Gerald Heasman, Bela H. Buck, 2025-02-17 Ocean based aquaculture has typically occurred in protected coastal environments however the industry has been expanding into offshore locations over the past few decades The term offshore has been used to broadly define any aquaculture facility that either is spatially far from shore or exposed to high energy environments even though these are different situations In most cases however offshore is not used in its primary sense namely the distance from the coastline A definition for offshore in the context of aquaculture has not been clearly defined and continues to lead to ambiguity and confusion among industry participants support industries academics and regulators Recent advances in the sector and a growing need to produce seafood from offshore environments creates a necessity for research and analysis to define and characterize the environments currently described as offshore and create a framework for industry members to understand and describe ocean environments effectively The research topic seeks to create a framework for describing aquaculture environments in the context of distance from shore and ocean energy as well as explore how these two parameters impact aquaculture technology operations regulation and economics Submissions should add to the understanding of offshore or open ocean aquaculture farms specifically in the context of the environment in which they operate A focus will be on creating definitions for the terms offshore open ocean and high energy in the context of marine farming such that these terms can be used more effectively in the future     A Global Assessment of Offshore Mariculture Potential from a Spatial Perspective James M.

Kapetsky, José Aguilar-Manjarrez, Jeff Jenness, Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2013 This publication was produced in recognition that there is a growing need to increasingly transfer land based coastal aquaculture production systems further offshore as a result of the expected increases in human population competition for access to land and clean water needed to increase the availability of fish and fishery products much needed for human consumption It provides for the first time measures of the status and potential for offshore mariculture development from a spatial perspective that are comprehensive of all maritime nations and comparable among them It also identifies nations that are not yet practicing mariculture that have a high offshore potential The underlying purpose of this document is to stimulate interest for detailed assessments of offshore mariculture potential at national levels     Proceedings, Sustainable Aquaculture 95 ,1995
