Disjointed War Bruce Nardulli, Walter L. Perry, Bruce R. Pirnie, John IV Gordon, John G. McGinn, 2002-06-05 An examination of the 1999 conflict in Kosovo with a focus on joint military operations The 1999 military operation against the Yugoslav Army in Kosovo suggests several areas in which Joint military operations were deficient This study examined all aspects of the Kosovo conflict including its political and historical underpinnings in an attempt to understand these deficiencies and to recommend improvements This document provided in both a classified and unclassified version is based on extensive original source documents and interviews with most of the principal participants and serves as the definitive Army record on Kosovo While the primary focus of the research was on U S Army involvement it covered many other aspects of Operation Allied Force Topics included NATO objectives in Operation Allied Force air and ground planning evolution of the air operation and its effects on fielded Yugoslav forces Task Force Hawk and peace operations The 1999 military operation in Kosovo suggests several areas in which Joint military operations were deficient This study examines all aspects of the Kosovo conflict with a focus on U S Army involvement including its political and historical underpinnings in an attempt to understand these deficiencies and to recommend improvements

Disjointed War. Military Operations in Kosovo, 1999, 2002 All military operations have problems and NATO's Operation Allied Force was no exception Nor did it accomplish every objective But whatever problems plagued the operation the outcome was a clear victory for NATO Operation Allied Force compelled the Yugoslavs to end the ethnic cleansing and expulsion of Kosovar Albanians withdraw their forces from Kosovo accept an international military presence in the province and permit the unconditional return of refugees Arguably it also compromised Slobodan Milosevic's ability to hold on to power and ultimately resulted in his incarceration All of that said problems abounded during the NATO military operation and this report focuses on these problems because they offer a rich trove of lessons for future operations Specifically we focus on a subset of problems those implicit in our title Disjointed War Allied Force was a joint multiservice operation but it was not fought that way at least to the extent that it could and should have been This was especially true when it came to joint planning and operations in integrating air and ground capabilities Operation Allied Force was also a combined multinational operation Fighting as an alliance brought essential political benefits but it also induced a host of issues that had important operational military implications These joint and combined difficulties caused confusion probably made the operation less effective than it could have been and possibly delayed victory Had Milosevic not capitulated and had the allies eventually decided to launch a ground offensive this disjointedness could have had severe consequences

Cooperation in Peace Operations Thomas R. Mockaitis, 2004 The humanitarian intervention in Kosovo provides an excellent case study of civil military cooperation CIMIC in peace operations The intervention required 40,000 heavily armed combat troops from NATO and Partnership for Peace countries to provide security and coordinate relief efforts with the UN the OSCE and over 500 humanitarian organizations CIMIC provided the mechanism for such cooperation and support Like any concept employed in coalition warfare CIMIC varied widely in the quality of its application This study examines the effectiveness of CIMIC within each brigade area and throughout the province as a whole It identifies best practices and common mistakes to derive lessons that might inform the conduct of future missions such as those currently underway in Iraq and Afghanistan Stability Operations in Kosovo 1999-2000 Jason Fritz,U S Army Peacekeeping and Stability Ope,2019-06-27 This case study examines the intervention and stability operations in Kosovo from March 24 1999 through approximately 2 years thereafter Set during the dissolution of the former Yugoslavia and preceded by ethnic carnage in Bosnia Croatia and elsewhere the intervention named Operation ALLIED FORCE was executed in order to protect Kosovars of Albanian descent from the ethnic cleansing of the Serbian leaders of the remaining federation of Yugoslavia

Government Accountability Office ,(2013-06 Following the failure of peace talks and escalating violence against ethnic Albanians in Kosovo the United States provided military support to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization NATO combat operations against Yugoslavia in March 1999 This report reviews how well the United States was prepared for basing its combat aircraft during this operation called Operation Allied Force Specifically GAO determines 1 whether plans were in place to determine where and how to deploy combat aircraft for an operation like Allied Force 2 how combat aircraft basing decisions were coordinated among the services and allied nations and 3 whether the United States had the necessary international agreements in place to enable it to quickly execute plans for such an operation GAO found that the United States had no specific and detailed advanced plans that could be used to determine where and how to deploy its combat aircraft during Operation Allied Force because it was a combination of peacetime and combat operations Overall plans for operations in defense of NATO members did not apply to this conflict Although part of the U S European Command s mission is to plan for NATO conflicts the Command had no prepared plan that could be applied to the conflict in Kosovo Neither the U S European Command nor any U S military service coordinated combat aircraft basing decisions for all the U S service components and for all allies The U S European Command serves as the focal point for American support to NATO but the services generally planned their own deployments Finally the United States had general agreements with most countries involved in Operation Allied Force to cover the legal status and protections of U S citizens However the United States did not have more specific agreements with many countries on such issues as which host countries would provide what airfield access and what rates would be charged for the logistics services provided Civil-Military Cooperation in Peace

Operations: The Case of Kosovo ,2004 Lessons From Kosovo: The KFOR Experience ,2002-01-01 Civil military unity of effort has been an essential yet frustrating elusive requirement for success in post cold war peace operations The need to coordinate collaborate and share information between civilian and military entities is on the rise and deemed essential requirements for success Today s information and communications technologies serve to facilitate the exchange of information among the disparate players of peace operations but the ability to actually realize open information sharing in real world coalition operations remains problematic The integration of relevant information and the timely dissemination of the processed information to interested parties in the field is well within the realities of today s technology Increased civil military involvement in peacekeeping and humanitarian operations around the world is matched in part by the rise in the number and complexity of these situations There are many more actors on today s peace operations landscape with competing as well as common interests and expectations The need to improve cooperation coordination and more open

information sharing is on the rise Efforts to improve and facilitate more open working together and information sharing among the disparate participants must overcome a continuing lack of trust among the civil military actors obsolete national and international policies unrealistic legal and funding constraints and outdated organization cultural traditions and behavior patterns Additionally all actors need to better understand each other and the roles they can and should play in an increasingly complex operational environment In order to obtain closure and improve the future situation the actors must develop relationships based on mutual trust and there must be a clear understanding that cooperation coordination and information sharing is a two way street In reality inefficiencies are inherent in any multilateral activity and competing interests and fear of loss of power and prestige make unity of effort a desired objective but also one that will be difficult to achieve Furthermore information is power and can be an effective means to an end but only if it can be interpreted shared and used effectively for military political or civil use Information can also help reduce uncertainty and provide those that possess it a decided advantage in the decisionmaking process There continues to be a general lack of trust among the players coupled with the lack of a shared understanding of the added value through more open and improved information sharing Information sharing among the actors on the peace operations landscape continues to be largely a manual process These obstacles need to be recognized and to the extent possible practical recommendations developed for ameliorating them Application of new technology must go beyond simply modernizing existing practices and capabilities The civil military community needs to look at new ways of doing business and how the rapidly advancing information technology can be used to leverage the power of information to help achieve timely and appropriate success of peace operations The patterns of conflict for the post cold war environment are changing and so are the approaches to military command and control Advances in information technology have enabled organizations and individuals to more effectively leverage the power of information yet for coalition operations where information sharing is essential to meet mission needs it continues to be problematic The issue is not technology but largely the will on the part of organizations and individuals to make it happen There is also a number of policy doctrine C4ISR systems cultural and environmental challenges that influence the ability to achieve more open sharing of information in coalition operations Annual Review of Global Peace Operations ,2010
