Tourism in National Capitals and Global Change Robert Maitland,2014-10-14 At a time of increasing city competition national capitals are at the forefront of efforts to gain competitive advantage for themselves and their nation to project a distinctive and positive image and to score well in global city league tables They are frequently their country s main tourist gateway and their success in attracting visitors is inextricably linked with that of the nation They attract not just leisure visitors they are especially important in other growing tourism markets for example as centres of power they feature strongly in business tourism as academic centres they are important for educational tourism and they frequently host global events such as the Olympic Games And there are more of them first the number of capitals has grown as the number of nation states has increased and secondly pressures for devolution mean more cities are seeking national capital status even when they are not at the head of independent states We need to understand tourism in capitals better but there has been little research in the past This book develops new insights as it explores the phenomenon of capital city tourism and uses recent research to examine the appeal of capitalness to tourists and explore developments in capitals across the world This book was published as a special issue of Current Issues in Tourism   Mississippi River--impounding of Water Above Keokuk Dam United States.
