New Immigrants:

The New Immigration CAROLA SUAREZ-OROZCO, Marcelo Suarez-Orozco, Desiree Baolian Qin-Hilliard, 2012-11-12 At the turn of the millennium the United States has the largest number of immigrants in its history As a consequence immigration has emerged once again as a subject of scholarly inquiry and policy debate This volume brings together the dominant conceptual and theoretical work on the New Immigration from such disparate disciplines as anthropology demography psychology and sociology Immigration today is a global and transnational phenomenon that affects every region of the world with unprecedented force Although this volume is devoted to scholarly work on the new immigration in the U S setting any of the broader conceptual issues covered here also apply to other post industrial countries such as France Germany and Japan

Achieving Anew Michael J. White, Jennifer E. Glick, 2009-04-09 Can the recent influx of immigrants successfully enter the mainstream of American life or will many of them fail to thrive and become part of a permanent underclass Achieving Anew examines immigrant life in school at work and in communities and demonstrates that recent immigrants and their children do make substantial progress over time both within and between generations From policymakers to private citizens our national conversation on immigration has consistently questioned the country's ability to absorb increasing numbers of foreign nationals now nearly one million legal entrants per year Using census data longitudinal education surveys and other data Michael White and Jennifer Glick place their study of new immigrant achievement within a context of recent developments in assimilation theory and policies regulating who gets in and what happens to them upon arrival They find that immigrant status itself is not an important predictor of educational achievement First generation immigrants arrive in the United States with less education than native born Americans but by the second and third generation the children of immigrants are just as successful in school as native born students with equivalent social and economic background As with prior studies the effects of socioeconomic background and family structure show through strongly On education attainment race and ethnicity have a strong impact on achievement initially but less over time Looking at the labor force White and Glick find no evidence to confirm the often voiced worry that recent immigrants and their children are falling behind earlier arrivals On the contrary immigrants of more recent vintage tend to catch up to the occupational status of natives more quickly than in the past Family background educational preparation and race ethnicity all play a role in labor market success just as they do for the native born but the offspring of immigrants suffer no disadvantage due to their immigrant origins New immigrants continue to live in segregated neighborhoods though with less prevalence than native black white segregation Immigrants who arrived in the 1960s are now much less segregated than recent arrivals Indeed the authors find that residential segregation declines both within and across generations Yet black and Mexican immigrants are more segregated from whites than other groups showing that race and economic status still remain powerful influences on where immigrants live Although the picture is mixed and the continuing significance of racial factors remains a concern Achieving Anew provides compelling reassurance that the recent wave of immigrants is making impressive progress in joining the American mainstream The process of assimilation is not broken the advent of a new underclass is not imminent and the efforts to argue for the restriction of immigration based on these fears are largely mistaken New Immigrants, Changing Communities Elżbieta M. Co-Production and Co-Creation Taco Brandsen, Bram Verschuere, Trui Steen, 2018-03-15 Co production and co creation occur when citizens participate actively in delivering and designing the services they receive It has come increasingly onto the agenda of policymakers as interest in citizen participation has more generally soared Expectations are high and it is regarded as a possible solution to the public sector's decreased legitimacy and dwindling resources by accessing more of society's capacities In addition it is seen as part of a more general drive to reinvigorate voluntary participation and strengthen social cohesion in an increasingly fragmented and individualized society Co Production and Co Creation Engaging Citizens in Public Services offers a systematic and comprehensive theoretical and empirical examination of the concepts of co production and co creation and their application in practice It shows the latest state of knowledge on the topic and will be of interest both to students at an advanced level academics and reflective practitioners It addresses the topics with regard to co production and co creation and will be of interest to researchers academics policymakers and students in the fields of public administration business administration economics political science public management political science service management sociology and voluntary sector studies New York Legislative Documents New York (State).
