Paranoid Parenting:

Paranoid Parenting Frank Furedi, 2002 Furedi sociology U of Kent UK especially aims his anti advice book at the worried American parent where anxiety regarding children's safety is at an unprecedented level. As evidence he cites the new child care industry that fosters paranoia and offers security companies like Kinderview and Toddlerwatch that allow parents to constantly watch their children from their personal computer. Whereas parenting used to be about nurturing and socializing now writes Furedi parenting has become burdensome overparenting too much about keeping children safe from overblown harms. Furedi is a frequent guest on British television. The book is distributed by the Independent Publishers Group. Annotation copyrighted by Book News Inc Portland OR. Paranoid Parenting Frank Furedi, 2001. Although children are safer and healthier than ever before Frank Furedi explains why parents feel paranoid and looks at how they can deal with insecurity fostered by experts and the media. He argues in favour of parents relying on their own judgement.

Parenting Culture Studies Ellie Lee, Jennie Bristow, Charlotte Faircloth, Jan Macvarish, 2015-12-04 Why have the minutiae of how parents raise their children become routine sources of public debate and policy making? Fear: Critical Geopolitics and Everyday Life Susan J. Smith, 2016-04-22 Fear in the twenty-first century has greater currency in western societies than ever before. Through scares ranging from cot death, juvenile crime, internet porn, asylum seekers, dirty bombs and avian flu, we are bombarded with messages about emerging risks. This book takes stock of a range of issues of fear and presents new theoretical arguments and research findings that cover topics as diverse as the war on terror, the immigration crisis, stranger danger, global disease epidemics and sectarian violence. This book charts the association of fear discourses with particular spaces, times, social identities and sets of geopolitical relations. It examines the ways in which fear may be manufactured and manipulated for political purposes, sometimes becoming a tool of repression and relates fear to political, economic and social marginalization at different scales. Furthermore, it highlights the importance and sometimes unpredictability of everyday lived experiences of fear, the many ways in which people recognize, make sense of and manage fear, the extent of resistance to fear, the relation of fear and hope in everyday life and the role of emotions in galvanizing political and social action and change.
