

A young child with light brown hair is sitting at a table, focused on playing with a stack of colorful wooden blocks. The blocks are arranged in a tall, multi-colored tower. The child is wearing a light-colored, long-sleeved shirt. In the background, a person in a white t-shirt is standing and watching the child. Another person's hands are visible on the right side of the frame, also interacting with the blocks. The setting appears to be a home or a child-friendly environment.

Parental Development Jack Demick,Krisanne Bursik,Rosemarie DiBiase,2014-02-25 This volume seeks to identify and define the parameters of a relatively new problem area parental development Drawing on the grand developmental theories of Sigmund Freud Lawrence Kohlberg Jean Piaget Lev Vygotsky Heinz Werner and their descendants this book has the potential to generate an area of common concern for those interested in either child adolescent or adult development through the novel application of developmental principles and considerations to the ecological context of parenting To that end this volume brings together theory and research from the subfields of adult and child adolescent development Chapter authors place the problem area of parental development in theoretical context and examine selected psychological part processes implicated by focusing on cognitive and psychosocial development The authors then deal with a range of issues that are perhaps less traditional and or more in line with the complex character of everyday life That is they utilize either relatively novel comparison groups or treat parents at later stages of development rather than those in young adulthood as is often the case Finally the authors uncover both similarities and differences among their theoretical perspectives with an eye toward delineating some possible future research directions

Development According to Parents W. Andrews Collins,Jacqueline J. Goodnow,2014-01-02 To their everyday life with children parents bring a number of ideas about development and about parenting Some of these ideas are about their own children and about themselves as parents Others are more general ideas for instance about what babies are like how children change with age what kinds of affection and control they need the responsibilities of mothers and fathers or the degree of influence each parent has over the way a child develops Moreover the ideas that parents hold shape their actions with children and the way they assess both their children and their own performance as parents With the recognition of parental thinking as a powerful factor in family life research has turned to the study of this everyday or informal psychology Some of the studies deal with the nature of parents ideas What ideas are held Which are most widely shared How do these ideas differ from one another Some deal with the sources of parents ideas with the factors that give rise to differences among parents from different backgrounds different cultures different economic groups different degrees of experience with children Others concentrate on the consequences of parents ideas for themselves and for children This monograph summarizes the research with an eye to several audiences researchers clinicians educators and with an emphasis on the questions that remain A major goal is to point not only to significant gaps but also to some specific ways in which they might be addressed by further research
