Parents And Mentally Handicapped Children Pelican S:

Parents as Partners in the Education of Their Handicapped Child Peter J. Mittler, Peter J. Owsley, 1980 Municipal Review, 1975 Institutional Care and the Mentally Handicapped Andy Alaszewski, 1986 Mental Health Interventions with Preschool Children Robert D. Lyman, Toni L. Hembree-Kigin, 2013-11-11 Preschool children have been largely neglected in the mental health treatment literature although research has established that many behavioral and emotional disorders in children result from events occurring during the preschool years or are first manifested during this period This has occurred for several reasons Traditional psychoanalytic thinking has considered preschoolers to be too psychologically immature for complete manifestations of psychopathology and the limited language abilities of young children have complicated assessment procedures and made them less appropriate for treatment approaches that are largely verbal in nature In addition the developmental complexity of the preschool period has deterred many researchers from investigating clinical issues with this age group Partly as a result of the lack of information on preschoolers in the literature practitioners have historically been uncomfortable in conducting assessments and initiating treatment with young children They have often adopted a wait and see attitude in which formal mental health diagnosis and treatment are not implemented until after the child's entry into school Unfortunately such a delay may mean wasting the time during which mental health interventions can be maximally effective Recently this attitude has changed and practitioners now recognize the need for assessment and treatment of behavioral and emotional disorders early in life What they require to assist them in the timely delivery of such services is information about assessment and treatment procedures specifically designed for preschoolers and with demonstrated efficacy with that age group Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.), First multi year cumulation covers six years 1965-70 Intellectual Disability in Health and Social Care Stacey Atkinson, Joanne Lay, Su McAnelly, Malcolm Richardson, 2014-09-16 Many practitioners within health and social care come into contact with people with intellectual disabilities and want to work in ways that are beneficial to them by making reasonable adjustments in order to meet clients needs and expectations Yet the health and wellbeing of people with learning disabilities continues to be a neglected area where unnecessary suffering and premature deaths continue to prevail This text provides a comprehensive insight into intellectual disability healthcare It is aimed at those who are training in the field of intellectual disability nursing and also untrained practitioners who work in both health and social care settings Divided into five sections it explores how a wide range of biological health psychological and social barriers impact upon people with learning disability and includes Six guiding principles used to adjust plan and develop meaningful and accessible health and social services Assessment screening and diagnosis of intellectual disability across the life course Addressing lifelong health needs Psychological and psychotherapeutic issues including sexuality behavioural and mental health needs bereavement and ethical concerns The changing professional roles and models of meeting the needs of people with intellectual and learning disabilities Intellectual Disability in Health and Social Care provides a wide ranging overview of what learning disability professionals roles are and provides insight into what health and social care practitioners might do to assist someone with intellectual disabilities when specific needs arise
