Wives and Dual-Earner Families Rose Rubin,Bobye J Riney,1994 This book analyzes the effects of wives employment on the economic status of families using both descriptive and empirical research The historical and socio economic causes of change in the employment status of wives and husbands are detailed The empirical studies respond to some basic questions about dual earner families How does having an employed wife influence family lifestyles What effects do dual earners have on the finances of their households and on the distribution of income What policy changes are needed to recognize the economic importance of dual earner families In Working Wives and Dual Earner Families one earner and dual earner families are differentiated with particular attention to the impact of wives employment status full time or part time on household decision making Among the most interesting research findings are total family income or tax bracket and the cost of child care are among the critical determinants of dual earner employment married couple families at the same level of income have very similar expenditure patterns regardless of whether the wife is employed full time working wives make the distribution of income less equal but part time working wives generate greater equality in the distribution of income families with full time working wives have higher income but they do not save more or have greater financial assets than other families families with part time employed wives are similar to those with non employed wives and differ from families with full time employed wives The authors conclude that the real incomes of dual earner families will continue to grow as one earner real income remains the same or declines Household planning and decision making will increasingly be predicated upon having two earners which will be perceived as the norm Dual earner families based on amenities mobility growing families and demands for public goods will drive private markets and public policy Handbook of Contemporary Families

Dual-earning Parents' Work-family Balance and Time with Children Shuting Xie, 2016 Achieving work family balance is a challenge for many families in Canada especially for dual earner families with children in the household Prior research regarding the predictors of work family balance has mainly focused on work characteristics therefore the current study aimed to assess the predictive effect of a key family characteristic quality time with children on work family balance The two objectives of this study were a to describe the association between time with children and parents work family balance among Canadian dual earner parents and b to understand the effects of age of the youngest child parent s gender and parent s age on the association between work family balance and quality time with children This study used cross sectional national time use data from the General Social Survey GSS 2010 Cycle 24 T test and logistic regression analyses were used to address the two research objectives and all analyses were weighted Findings indicated that work family balance was negatively associated with quality time with children Age of the youngest child parent s gender and parent s age were found to moderate the effect of quality time with children on work family balance The negative effect of quality time with children on work family balance was stronger for parents who had a youngest child of an older age than for those who had a youngest child of a younger age for parents who were older than for those who were younger and for mothers more than for fathers Findings of this study can add strength to the understanding of work family balance of Canadian parents and have implications for helping Canadians balance their paid work and family life demands As
