Paris and Its Environs Findlay Muirhead,Marcel Monmarché,1924      Old and New Paris: Its History, its People and its Places (Complete) Henry Sutherland Edwards, A PARISIAN who is not rich enough to keep a distinguished chef of his own will occasionally order a dainty dinner to be forwarded to him from some hotel or restaurant and in these cases the repast as soon as it is ready is sometimes put into a hackney cab and driven to the house of the consignee by the cocher who is not unaccustomed to find this fare more remunerative than the fare he habitually conveys A glance at the cocher as another of the Parisian types of character may here be not inopportune As a matter of fact however the cocher is not one type but several The name applies to the driver of the omnibus of the fiacre and of the private carriage As to the omnibus driver he is more amiable more easy going less sarcastic than his counterpart in London Nobody would ever hear an omnibus driver in Paris say as one has been heard to say in London when a lady passenger requested to be put down at 339 Street Certainly madam and would you like me to drive upstairs Nor is the Paris cabman so extortionate as his London brother for the fare regulations by which there is one fixed charge for the conveyance of a passenger any distance within a certain radius precludes the inevitable dispute which awaits the lady or gentleman who in our metropolis dares to take a four wheeler or a hansom Already in the sixteenth century hackney carriages were driven in the streets of Paris and any differences arising between the cocher and his passenger were at this period referred to the lieutenant of the police The private coachmen attached to the service of the nobility found their position a somewhat perilous one in an age when quarrels were so frequent on the question of social precedence If two aristocratic carriages met in some narrow street barring each other s way the footmen would get down and fight for a passage Serious wounds were sometimes inflicted and even the master would now and then step out of his vehicle and with drawn sword join in the affray The coachman meanwhile prouder in livery than his master in braided coat remained motionless on his box in spite of the blows which were being dealt around It is related that when on one occasion a party of highwaymen attacked the carriage of Benserade poet wit and dramatic author his coachman sat calmly at his post and amused himself with whistling whilst his master was being stripped of everything From time to time he turned towards the robbers and said Gentlemen shall you soon have finished and can I continue my journey
