Computational Neuroscience Eric L. Schwartz, 1993-08-26 The thirty original contributions in this book provide a working definition of computational neuroscience as the area in which problems lie simultaneously within computer science and neuroscience They review this emerging field in historical and philosophical overviews and in stimulating summaries of recent results Leading researchers address the structure of the brain and the computational problems associated with describing and understanding this structure at the synaptic neural map and system levels The overview chapters discuss the early days of the field provide a philosophical analysis of the problems associated with confusion between brain metaphor and brain theory and take up the scope and structure of computational neuroscience Synaptic level structure is addressed in chapters that relate the properties of dendritic branches spines and synapses to the biophysics of computation and provide a connection between real neuron architectures and neural network simulations The network level chapters take up the preattentive perception of 3 D forms oscillation in neural networks the neurobiological significance of new learning models and the analysis of neural assemblies and local learning grids Map level structure is explored in chapters on the bat echolocation system cat orientation maps primate stereo vision cortical cognitive maps dynamic remapping in primate visual cortex and computer aided reconstruction of topographic and columnar maps in primates The system level chapters focus on the oculomotor system VLSI models of early vision schemas for high level vision goal directed movements modular learning effects of applied electric current fields on cortical neural activity neuropsychological studies of brain and mind and an information theoretic view of analog representation in striate cortex Eric L. Sharkey, 1989 Each of the eleven chapters in this volume discusses a different model of cognition ranging from image analysis through word recognition to communication failure in dialogue and covers the spectrum of techniques from the purely symbolic to the purely connectionist Knowledge Representation Han Reichgelt, 1991 Most researchers to date in artificial intelligence have been based on the knowledge representation hypothesis that is the assumption that in any artificial intelligence AI programme there is a separate module which represents the information that the programme has about the world As a result a number of so called knowledge representation formalisms have been developed for representing this kind of information in a computer A Textbook of Clinical Neurophysiology A. Devijver, Josef Kittler, 1987 This book is the outcome of a NATO Advanced Study Institute on Pattern Recognition Theory and Applications held in Spa Balmoral Belgium in June 1986 This Institute was the third of a series which started in 1975 in Bandol France at the initiative of Professors K S Fu and A Whinston and continued in 1981 in

Oxford UK with Professors K S Fu J Kittler and L F Pau as directors As early as in 1981 plans were made to pursue the series in about 1986 and possibly in Belgium with Professor K S Fu and the present editors as directors Unfortunately Ie sort en decida autrement Professor Fu passed away in the spring of 1985 His sudden death was an irreparable loss to the scientific community and to all those who knew him as an inspiring colleague a teacher or a dear friend Soon after Josef Kittler and I decided to pay a small tribute to his memory by helping some of his plans to materialize With the support of the NATO Scientific Affairs Division the Institute became a reality It was therefore but natural that the proceedings of the Institute be dedicated to him The book contains most of the papers that were presented at the Institute Papers are grouped along major themes which hopefully represent the major areas of contemporary research These are 1 Statistical methods and clustering techniques 2 Probabilistic relaxation techniques 3 From Markovian to connectionist models 4 Intelligent Robots and Computer Vision ,1992
