

Modes of Occurrence of Minerals and Mining

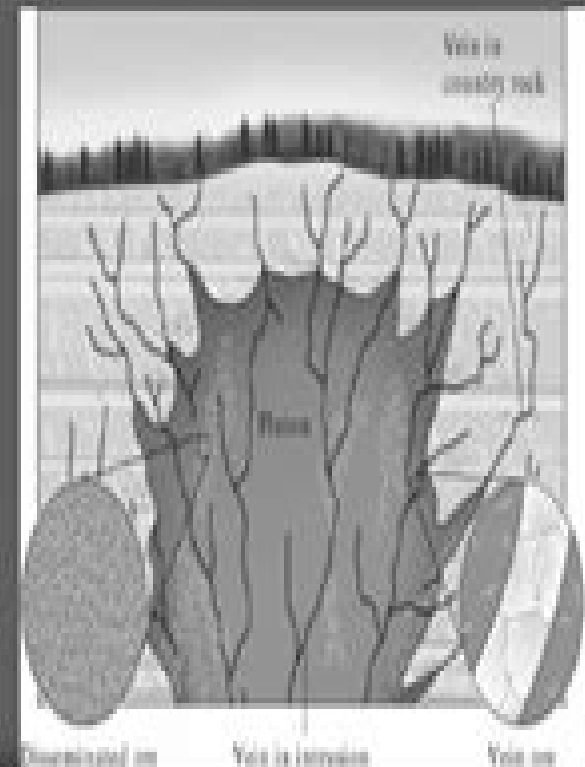

There are various modes of occurrence of minerals.

Veins and Lodes:

- The smaller occurrences are called veins and the larger occurrences are called lodes.
- They are usually formed when minerals in liquid/molten and gaseous forms are forced upwards through cavities towards the earth's surface. Examples: tin, copper, zinc, lead.

• Lode – many thick mineral veins in a small region

– Ex. – The “Mother Lode” during the California gold rush
