Narrating Karma and Rebirth Naomi Appleton,2014-02-13 Buddhism and Jainism share the concepts of karma rebirth and the desirability of escaping from rebirth The literature of both traditions contains many stories about past and sometimes future lives which reveal much about these foundational doctrines Naomi Appleton carefully explores how multi life stories served to construct communicate and challenge ideas about karma and rebirth within early South Asia examining portrayals of the different realms of rebirth the potential paths and goals of human beings and the biographies of ideal religious figures Appleton also deftly surveys the ability of karma to bind individuals together over multiple lives and the nature of the supernormal memory that makes multi life stories available in the first place This original study not only sheds light on the individual preoccupations of Buddhist and Jain tradition but contributes to a more complete history of religious thought in South Asia and brings to the foreground long neglected narrative sources    BBC Procurement Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Committee of Public Accounts,2008 The BBC spends over 500 million each year on goods and services ranging from broadcast specific products to more generic items It has a centralised procurement function and manages spending along category enabling it to control its spending more effectively than in the past The BBC was aiming to deliver 75 million savings from procurement in the three years to April 2008 and is on course to achieve those But savings have varied widely between categories and it has achieved least from those where it has spent most Production Resources and Technology and Broadcast Equipment In recent years the BBC has used fewer suppliers and has established central contracts for a greater proportion of its goods and services but in 2006 07 it still used over 17 000 suppliers That year the BBC spent more than 200 million through local deals and made nearly 38 000 individual purchases from suppliers with which it had no central contract During 2006 07 the BBC introduced an upgraded electronic purchasing system but 2 000 of the 4 500 licences it had paid for to give staff access to the system were not being used The average cost of processing a purchase using the system is 6 although the cost is more than six times greater when buyers do not use a central contract The BBC uses technology across all of its procurement activities including letting tenders through eAuctions The BBC has made estimated annual savings of 3 million 14 per cent from the 19 eAuctions it ran between April 2005 and March 2007 but since then had let only five more contracts in this way
