

The background of the entire cover is a scanning electron micrograph (SEM) of numerous plant pollen grains. The grains are roughly oval or elliptical in shape and exhibit a highly textured, reticulate surface with distinct ridges and grooves. They are densely packed, with some grains in sharp focus in the foreground and others blurred in the background, creating a sense of depth. The color palette is monochromatic, using shades of grey and black to highlight the intricate surface details of the pollen.

Molecular And Cellular Aspects Of Reproduction:

Molecular and Cellular Aspects of Reproduction, 1986-10-31 Molecular and Cellular Aspects of Reproduction Dharam S. Dhindsa, Om P. Bahl, 2013-11-10 Recently considerable attention has been focused on studies of membrane structure and function involvement of cell surface components in intercellular interaction in translocation of ligands and receptors across cell membranes and in the immunological properties of cells and gene expression and regulation These investigations have led to the development of powerful technical tools which can be of immense value in the study of animal and human reproduction The investigations of problems such as gamete interaction fertilization embryo implantation and development have reached a stage where further meaningful progress in their understanding does not seem likely unless the conventional approaches are coupled with more modern molecular and cellular techniques Furthermore it is only through such basic studies that potential means of fertility regulation will emerge The various physiological events in animal reproduction such as fertilization and implantation essentially involve an interaction between specific cell membrane components Similarly embryogenesis involves the expression and regulation of genes at various stages of development Therefore the entire Workshop was specifically devoted to two topics 1 Structure function and biosynthesis of membrane components and 2 Gene expression and regulation as related to animal reproduction The presentations relating to each topic are presented in separate sections in this book Molecular and Cellular Aspects of Reproduction Dharam S. Dhindsa, Om P. Bahl, 1967 Molecular and Cellular Aspects of Basement Membranes David H Rohrbach, Rupert Timpl, 1993-03-23 Molecular and Cellular Aspects of Basement Membranes reviews the knowledge about the molecular and cellular aspects of basement membranes This book focuses on the composition of basement membranes and their organization in extracellular matrices and presents a structural analysis of the various components of the basement membrane The importance of basement membranes with respect to cell matrix interactions differentiation and pathology is also considered This text is organized into three sections and is comprised of 20 chapters It begins with historical perspectives and an overview of the extracellular matrix in general and the basement membrane in particular The discussion then turns to the organization of basement membrane components into a three dimensional and functional matrix along with the unique characteristics of basement membranes in skin nerve and kidney The reader is also introduced to the specificity of particular basement membranes in particular histological sites the molecular characteristics of basement membrane collagens laminins and proteoglycans and the interaction of specific peptide domains of basement membrane components with cell surface receptors Finally the book explains how subtle changes in basement membrane composition or protein structure can cause dramatic pathology This book will be of value to cell biologists molecular biologists biochemists and pathologists Programmed Cell Death in Higher Plants E. Lam, H. Fukuda, J. Greenberg, 2000-12-31 The molecular mechanisms which determine whether the cells of a multicellular organism will live or commit suicide have become a popular field of research in biology during the last decade Cell death research in the plant field has also been expanding rapidly in the past 5 years This special volume of Plant Molecular Biology seeks to bring together examples of a diverse array of experimental approaches in a single volume From the differentiation of tracheary elements in vascular plants to the more specialized cell death model of the aleurone in cereals this volume will bring the reader up to date with the characterization of different plant model systems that are currently being studied This endeavor should complement general overviews of plant cell death mechanisms that have been published elsewhere by providing more detailed information on various aspects of this field to interested graduate students and more senior biologists alike

INIS Atomindex ,1987 日本原子力研究所 (Japan),1990 Molecular and Cellular Aspects of Plant Reproduction Rod J. Scott,A. D. Stead,1994-11-24 Molecular biology techniques have considerably increased our understanding of mechanisms underlying the control of flower initiation development function and senescence processes which can be critically important in managing the yield of agricultural crops The book covers the molecular and genetic control of flower morphogenesis in particular species and discusses the role and regulation of gene expression in the development together with action of the male and female gametes in plant reproduction The considerable variation in longevity of flowers and pattern of senescence are reviewed The importance of ethylene in the control mechanism is discussed using examples of both ethylene sensitive and insensitive species The book will be vital to those researching floral physiology and a useful reference for undergraduates studying relevant botanical courses
