Moments In Thought:

Thinking Without Thinking in the Victorian Novel Vanessa L. Ryan, 2012-06-07 In Thinking without Thinking in the Victorian Novel Vanessa L. Ryan demonstrates how both the form and the experience of reading novels played an important role in ongoing debates about the nature of consciousness during the Victorian era. Revolutionary developments in science during the mid and late nineteenth century including the discoveries and writings of Herbert Spencer, William Carpenter and George Henry Lewes had a vital impact on fiction writers of the time. Wilkie Collins, George Eliot, George Meredith and Henry James read contributions in what we now call cognitive science that asked what is the mind. These Victorian fiction writers took a crucial step asking how we experience our minds, how that experience relates to our behavior and questions of responsibility, how we can gain control over our mental reflexes and finally how fiction plays a special role in understanding and training our minds. Victorian fiction writers focus not only on the question of how the mind works but also on how it seems to work and how we ought to make it work. Ryan shows how the novelistic emphasis on dynamic processes and functions on the activity of the mind rather than its structure or essence can also be seen in some of the most exciting and comprehensive scientific revisions of the understanding of thinking in the Victorian period. This book studies the way in which the mind in the nineteenth century view is embedded not just in the body but also in behavior, in social structures and finally in fiction.

Right Thoughts at the Last Moment Jacqueline I. Stone, 2016-11-30

Buddhists across Asia have often aspired to die with a clear and focused mind as the historical Buddha himself is said to have done. This book explores how the ideal of dying with right mindfulness was appropriated, disseminated and transformed in premodern Japan, focusing on the late tenth through early fourteenth centuries. By concentrating one's thoughts on the Buddha in one's last moments, it was said, even an ignorant and sinful person could escape the cycle of deluded rebirth and achieve birth in a Buddha's pure land where liberation would be assured. Conversely, the slightest mental distraction at that final juncture could send even a devout practitioner tumbling down into the hells or other miserable rebirth realms. The ideal of mindful death thus generated both hope and anxiety and created a demand for ritual specialists who could act as religious guides at the deathbed. Buddhist death management in Japan has been studied chiefly from the standpoint of funerals and mortuary rites Right Thoughts at the Last Moment investigates a largely untold side of that story how early medieval Japanese prepared for death and how desire for ritual assistance in one's last hours contributed to Buddhist preeminence in death related matters It represents the first book length study in a Western language to examine how the Buddhist ideal of mindful death was appropriated in a specific historical context Practice for one's last hours occupied the intersections of multiple often disparate approaches that Buddhism offered for coping with death Because they crossed sectarian lines and eventually permeated all social levels deathbed practices afford insights into broader issues in medieval Japanese religion including intellectual developments devotional practices pollution concerns ritual performance and divisions of labor among religious professionals They also allow us to see beyond the categories of old versus new Buddhism or establishment Buddhism versus marginal heterodoxies which have characterized much scholarship to date Enlivened by cogent examples this study draws on a wealth of sources including ritual instructions hagiographies doctrinal writings didactic tales courtier diaries historical records letters and relevant art historical material to explore the interplay of doctrinal ideals and on the ground practice

Personal Control in Action Mirosław Kofta, Gifford Weary, Grzegorz Sedek, 1998-06-30 This new study presents exciting international research developments on personal control and self regulation Each chapter examines the subject at a different level of analysis to foster a complete understanding Brief synopses of each chapter are provided as introductions to the three major sections of the book These sections cover the person as an agent of control affective and cognitive mechanisms of executive agency and reactions to threatened control
