Mathematical Applications In Political Science Vol 5:

American Political Scientists Glenn H. Utter, Charles Lockhart, 2002-10-30 This dictionary offers the only comprehensive collection of profiles of American political scientists each of whom contributed significantly to the intellectual development of American political science from its beginnings in the late 19th century to the present This second edition includes 22 new and 110 revised entries reflecting new scholarship that emerged during the 1990s Numerous experts helped the editors develop this consensus group of the 193 political scientists who have made the most important theoretical contributions over the years with attention to varied approaches and the different subfields Alphabetically arranged entries focus on the main ideas and major works by each scholar listing list the most important publications by and about the individual There are numerous cross references to show how the work of one scholar has influenced another in the discipline Appendices list the political scientists by degree granting institutions and by major fields A short bibliography points to important general readings about the profession A general index makes this major reference easily accessible for broad interdisciplinary research Leadership and Politics Bryan D. Jones, 1989 In twelve essays influential scholars in political science explore the meaning of political leadership from the kaleidoscopic perspectives of the leaders institutions goals procedures problems and traditions involved The approaches as varied as the subject itself coalesce around the central question of how leaders interact with transform or are controlled by the organizations they lead

Recognition Theory and Application King Sun Fu, A.B. Whinston, 1977-12-31 Research in the field of pattern recognition both in theoretical terms and in the area of application continues to flourish Pattern recognition is a fairly diverse field involving researchers whose primary disciplines spread over at least a half dozen fields Possibly because of the great diversity of backgrounds but a common interest in certain broad areas of application the field has grown so rapidly and yet seems to promise at least a similar growth rate for the future This book is a collection containing some of the papers that were presented at the N A T O Advanced Study Institute held in Bandol France September 1975 The main purpose of the institute was to present material which would provide a basic background in the field Thus survey papers covering syntactic methods picture processing classification theory and speech recognition were presented This should have provided the listener and we hope now the reader with an acquaintance with the basic tools a look at some of the applications and an appraisal of how each of the particular topics will evolve A more recent addition to the pattern recognition family is the work in the areas of economics and group choice Since the process of recognizing and interpreting patterns is so fundamental it probably is no surprise when a particular discipline is discovered to be amenable to the already developed techniques
