Reproductive, maternal, newborn, and child health in Pakistan: challenges and opportunities

Globally, Pakistan has the third highest burden of maternal, fetal, and child mortality. It has made slow progress in achieving the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) 4 and 5 and in addressing common social determinants of health. The country also has huge challenges of political fragility, complex security issues, and natural disasters. We undertook an in-depth analysis of Pakistan's progress towards MDGs 4 and 5 and the principal determinants of health in relation to reproductive, maternal, newborn, and child health and nutrition. We reviewed progress in relation to new and existing public sector programmes and the challenges posed by devolution in Pakistan. Notwithstanding the urgent need to tackle social determinants such as girls' education, empowerment, and nutrition in Pakistan, we assessed the effect of systematically increasing coverage of various evidence-based interventions on populations at risk (by residence or poverty indices). We specifically focused on scaling up interventions using delivery platforms to reach poor and rural populations through community-based strategies. Our model indicates that with successful implementation of these strategies, 58% of an estimated 36 7900 deaths (15 900 maternal, 8 600 newborn, 18 3 000 child deaths) and 49% of an estimated 180 000 stillbirths could be prevented in 2015.

Introduction

More than 90% of 7 million deaths globally in children younger than 5 years occur in only 40 countries, with most deaths occurring in just a few countries in south Asia and sub-Saharan Africa.¹ Pakistan is at the centre of a very volatile geopolitical region with several decades of conflict within the country and in the bordering areas. It is a fairly young but populous nation; the population has grown from 27 million at the time of independence in 1947 to an estimated 185 million people in 2012, and 61.7% of the population are younger than 14 years. Globally, the country has the third and second highest rates of newborn mortality and stillbirths;^{2,3} its rate of progress in achieving the targets for the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) 4 and 5 have been slow.⁴ Although much of the health-related information from Pakistan is assessed at an aggregate level, the country has a vast and diverse landscape of almost 800 000 km² and huge differences between its six provinces and the Federally Administered Tribal Areas in resources, access, and development. The devolution in June, 2011, of the Federal Ministry of Health and the constitutional devolution of health to the provinces⁵ have placed a bigger impetus on provinces for planning and actions in relation to public health, especially reproductive, maternal, newborn, and child health (RMNCH).

Key messages

- Despite periods of stable economy and the dividends of a young population, Pakistan's progress in achieving Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) 4 and 5 for reproductive health and maternal and child health, respectively, remains unsatisfactory.
- Progress in addressing key social determinants such as poverty, female education and empowerment, and undernutrition has been slow, and unflattened population growth eliminates economic and health gains.
- For health and development indicators, huge disparities exist between and within provinces, indicating the need for targeting and proactive strategies to reach poor and marginalised communities.
- Existing programmes such as the Lady Health Workers Programme, if improved and linked to functional primary care and secondary care facilities, are important strategies to achieve change in the short term but need to be coupled with improvements in quality of care in the health system.
- In the long term, Pakistan needs the political will to prioritise pro-poor and integrated reproductive, maternal, newborn, and child health services after devolution of health services to the provinces.
- Many gains are possible. A restricted repertoire of evidence-based interventions packaged to address reproductive, maternal, newborn, and child health issues have the potential to reduce the burden of maternal and child deaths by 52%, but need to be scaled up with strategies to overcome poverty and barriers to access.

Search strategy and selection criteria

We searched all electronic databases for information that was relevant to reproductive health and maternal and child health in Pakistan since Jan 1, 1990. We used a comprehensive search strategy with extensive hand searches and cross tabulation of reports and references to access grey literature. There were no language restrictions.

The search strategy was iterative and the final version included core terms ("maternal and child health" OR "maternal" OR "woman" OR "mothers" OR "pregnant" OR "infant" OR "newborn" OR "neonate" OR "child" OR "reproductive" OR "family planning" OR "infant" OR "maternal survival" OR "child survival") AND ("Pakistan" OR "Punjab" OR "Sindh" OR "North West Frontier Province" OR "NWFP" OR "Khyber Pakhtunkhwa" OR "Balochistan" OR "Pakistan province").

Riley,Jan Brunson,2018-05-02 This handbook presents a comprehensive and up to date overview of gender in demography addressing the many different influences of gender that arise from or influence demographic processes It collects in one volume the key issues and perspectives in this area whereby demography is broadly defined The purpose in casting a wide net is to cover the range of work being done within demography but at the same time to open up our perspectives to neighboring fields to encourage better conversations around these issues The chapters in this handbook carefully document definition and measurement issues and take up parts of the demographic picture and focus on how gender plays a role in outcomes In other cases gender often plays a cross cutting role in social processes rather than having a single or easily distinguishable role it often combines with other social institutions and even other statuses and inequalities to affect outcomes Thus a key factor in this volume is how gender interacts with race ethnicity class nationality and sexuality in any demographic setting While each section contains chapters that are broad overviews of the current state of knowledge and behavior the handbook also includes chapters that focus on specific cultures or events in order to examine how gender operates in a particular circumstance Public Health and Nutrition Manoranjan Pal,Md. Golam Hossain,Rashidul Alam Mahumud,Premananda Bharati,2024-12-12 This book addresses the health status of both mothers and children highlighting acute malnutrition through anthropometric indices such as weight for height weight for age height for age and BMI Divided into four sections it provides an overview of public health and nutrition presents the state of the art situation in South and South east Asia and analyzes real life data on public health and nutrition not only from India and Bangladesh but also from other countries in South and South east Asia The book covers insightful analyses of child nutrition maternal health and socioeconomic factors with an emphasis on maternal empowerment health seeking behavior and healthcare accessibility in diverse contexts The book also addresses topics such as identification of potential genes for prostate cancer and quality of life and living arrangements of ageing population The book is relevant for researchers in the fields of biostatistics
