The Nature of Scientific Innovation, Volume II David Dent, 2024-12-18
Innovation is a major driver of social, economic, and environmental change and is researched extensively by academics from disciplines as diverse as business, engineering, economics, sociology, and psychology. On the whole, each discipline pursues its own pathway to understanding without an interdisciplinary framework that links diverse research outputs. This partite structure creates a remove from the practical realities of entrepreneurship and the innovators who operate and perceive innovation in its entirety. This book delivers insights and creates a different framework, one that includes terminologies and typologies, greater understanding of paradigmatic influences in science, needs vs. wants and demand, impact and value of knowledge, publications and patents, and economic benefits. It challenges current approaches to education, research, creativity, and skills development, infrastructure, investment, and policy. This book addresses changes needed to better deliver innovation at a time when the world is desperate for solutions to global problems. It will be of interest to scholars and students of innovation from multiple disciplines, as well as practitioners, policymakers, and all those with an interest in scientific innovation. The second volume focuses on those individuals who actually deliver innovation, the nature, traits, skills, and behaviours that characterise inventors, intrapreneurs, and entrepreneurs How does a nation generate sufficient innovators to positively impact on the economy and how can systems and organisations at all levels be best geared to meet their needs The conundrum posed in providing a supportive leadership and organisational culture for innovators who naturally challenge prevailing orthodoxies and approaches is addressed along with the means to unleash and resource disruptive entrepreneurs to do what they do best to innovate and underpin economic social and environmental progress Figure Drawing Florencio B.
