Making Climate Forecasts Matter:

Making Climate Forecasts Matter National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Board on Environmental Change and Society, Commission on Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Panel on the Human Dimensions of Seasonal-to-Interannual Climate Variability, 1999-05-27 El Nino has been with us for centuries but now we can forecast it and thus can prepare far in advance for the extreme climatic events it brings. The emerging ability to forecast climate may be of tremendous value to humanity if we learn how to use the information well. How does society cope with seasonal to interannual climatic variations? How have climate forecasts been used and how useful have they been? What kinds of forecast information are needed? Who is likely to benefit from forecasting skill? What are the benefits of better forecasting? This book reviews what we know about these and other questions and identifies research directions toward more useful seasonal to interannual climate forecasts. In approaching their recommendations the panel explores Vulnerability of human activities to climate, State of the science of climate forecasting, How societies coevolved with their climates and cope with variations in climate, How climate information should be disseminated to achieve the best response, How we can use forecasting to better manage the human consequences of climate change.

Seasonal Climate: Forecasting and Managing Risk Alberto Troccoli, Mike Harrison, David L.T. Anderson, Simon J. Mason, 2008-02-22 Originally formed around a set of lectures presented at a NATO Advanced Study Institute ASI this book has grown to become organised and presented rather more as a textbook than as a standard collection of proceedings. This therefore is the first unified reference textbook in seasonal to interannual climate predictions and their practical uses. Written by some of the world's leading experts the book covers a rapidly developing science of prime social concern.

Knowledge-Action Systems for Seasonal to Interannual Climate Forecasting National Research Council, Policy and Global Affairs, Roundtable on Science and Technology for Sustainability, James Buizer, David W. Cash, 2005-02-21 The National Academies Roundtable on Science and Technology for Sustainability hosted a workshop Knowledge Action Systems for Seasonal to Interannual Climate Forecasting in 2004 to discover and distill general lessons about the design of effective systems for linking knowledge with action from the last decade's experience with the production and application of seasonal to interannual climate forecasts. Workshop participants described lessons they had learned based on their experiences developing, applying and using decision support systems in the United States, Columbia, Brazil and Australia. Some of the key lessons discussed as characterized by David Cash and James Buizer were that effective knowledge action systems define and frame the problem to be addressed via collaboration between knowledge users and knowledge producers, tend to be end to end systems that link user needs to basic scientific findings and observations are often anchored in boundary organizations that act as intermediaries between nodes in the system, most notably between scientists and decision makers, feature flexible processes and institutions to be responsive to what is learned, use funding strategies tailored to the dual public private character of such systems and require people who can work across disciplines issue areas and the knowledge action interface

Fair Weather National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Computer Science and Telecommunications Board, Board on Atmospheric Sciences and Climate, Board on Earth Sciences and Resources, Committee on Geophysical and Environmental Data, Committee on Partnerships in Weather and Climate Services, 2003-05-14

Decades of evolving U S policy have led to three sectors providing weather services NOAA primarily the National Weather Service NWS academic institutions and private companies This three sector system has produced a scope and diversity of weather services in the United States second to none However rapid scientific and technological change is changing the capabilities of the sectors and creating occasional friction

Fair Weather Effective Partnerships in Weather and Climate Services examines the roles of the three sectors in providing weather and climate services the barriers to interaction among the sectors and the impact of scientific and technological advances on the weather enterprise Readers from all three sectors will be interested in the analysis and recommendations provided in Fair Weather

Climate Prediction and Agriculture Mannava VK Sivakumar, James Hansen, 2007-05-26

Improved adaptation of food production particularly in areas where climate variability is large holds the key to improving food security for human populations Increasing climate knowledge and improved prediction capabilities facilitate the development of relevant climate information and prediction products for applications in agriculture to reduce the negative impacts due to climate variations and to enhance planning activities based on the developing capacity of climate science This book based on an International Workshop held in Geneva in 2005 reviews the advances made so far in seasonal climate predictions and their applications for management and decision making in agriculture and identifies the challenges to be addressed in the next 5 to 10 years to further enhance operational applications of climate predictions in agriculture especially in the developing countries

Completing the Forecast National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Board on Atmospheric Sciences and Climate, Committee on Estimating and Communicating Uncertainty in Weather and Climate Forecasts, 2006-11-09

Uncertainty is a fundamental characteristic of weather seasonal climate and hydrological prediction and no forecast is complete without a description of its uncertainty Effective communication of uncertainty helps people better understand the likelihood of a particular event and improves their ability to make decisions based on the forecast Nonetheless for decades users of these forecasts have been conditioned to receive incomplete information about uncertainty They have become used to single valued deterministic forecasts e g the high temperature will be 70 degrees Farenheit 9 days from now and applied their own experience in determining how much confidence to place in the forecast Most forecast products from the public and private sectors including those from the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration s National Weather Service continue this deterministic legacy Fortunately the National Weather Service and others in the prediction community have recognized the need to view uncertainty as a fundamental part of forecasts By partnering with other segments of the community to understand user needs generate relevant and rich informational products and utilize effective communication vehicles the National Weather Service can take a leading role in the transition to widespread effective incorporation of uncertainty information into predictions Completing the Forecast makes recommendations to the National Weather Service and the broader prediction community on how to make this transition
