Perspectives on Arabic Linguistics ,2006 The papers in this volume are a selection from papers presented at the Annual Symposium on Arabic Linguistics held in Cambridge UK in 2002. They deal with a wide range of theoretical issues in varieties of Arabic. International Journal of the Sociology of Language, 2002. Contexts of Accommodation Howard Giles, J. Coupland, N. Coupland, 1991. The theory of accommodation is concerned with motivations underlying and consequences arising from ways in which we adapt our language and communication patterns toward others. Since accommodation theory's emergence in the early 1970s, it has attracted empirical attention across many disciplines and has been elaborated and expanded many times. In Contexts of Accommodation, accommodation theory is presented as a basis for sociolinguistic explanation and it is the applied perspective that predominates this edited collection. The book seeks to demonstrate how the core concepts and relationships invoked by accommodation theory are available for addressing altogether pragmatic concerns. Accommodative processes can, for example, facilitate or impede language learners' proficiency in a second language as well as immigrants' acceptance into certain host communities. Audience ratings and, thereby, the life of a television program affect reaction to defendants in court and hence the nature of the judicial outcome and be an enabling or detrimental force in allowing handicapped people to fulfil their communicative potential. Contexts of Accommodation will appeal to researchers and advanced students in language and communication sciences as well as to sociolinguists, anthropologists, sociologists, and psychologists. *Z.
