

prevention of occupational cancer

Prevention

Many occupational cancers are preventable.

- Personal protective gear,
- workplace controls, and
- worker education can prevent exposure to carcinogens in the workplace.
- Tobacco smoking has also been shown to increase the risk of work-related cancers; decreasing or abstaining from smoking can decrease cancer risk.
- Agencies like the US Food and Drug Administration, Environmental Protection Agency, the International Agency for Research on Cancer (IARC) and Occupational Safety and Health Administration have developed safety standards and limits for chemical and radiation exposure.

WHO says that

- prevention of exposure to carcinogens in the workplace may be the most efficient way to prevent cancer.
- “The control of carcinogens in the workplace should be a key component of every national cancer control programme

Occupational Cancer: Prevention and Control ,1979 Occupational Cancer International Labour Office,1977

Occupational Cancer. Prevention and Control. Second (revised) Edition. Occupational Safety and Health Series

International Labour Organization,1988 The prevention of occupational cancer and the protection of workers against carcinogens has been an important ILO activity during the past two decades In 1977 the publication of the first edition of Occupational cancer Prevention and control was a step towards providing guidance to all those responsible for applying the principles of the Occupational Cancer Convention 1974 No 139 and Recommendation 1974 No 147 Now in the light of advancing knowledge and the evaluation of risks from carcinogens the text has been completely revised and greatly expanded with the technical help of the Prevention of Occupational Cancer ,1982 Control and Prevention of Occupational Cancer ,1972

Cancer Prevention: The Causes and Prevention of Cancer – Volume 1 Graham A.

Colditz,D.J. Hunter,2006-04-11 This Cancer Prevention book series aims to complement the research reported in the journal Cancer Causes and Control Volumes in this series will summarize the state of the science from causes to prevention of cancer The scope will be international The past 20 years has seen an explosion of epidemiologic material on the causes of cancer Examples include the growing number of studies of physical activity and colon cancer which have emerged and the numerous studies of components of diet such as alcohol and the risk of specific cancers Major shifts in resource allocation now focus on translation of this new knowledge to actual cancer prevention programs Researchers practicing clinicians and those who write and implement public health policy need this information summarized in an easily accessible format The abundance of knowledge increasing understanding of how to communicate risk of cancer to the public and greater public awareness of cancer make the coming years ones in which we will see many new attempts at widespread cancer prevention programs For example the U S Centers for Disease Control and Prevention launched a national colon cancer awareness campaign in early 1999 Research Awards Index ,1983 Control and Prevention of Occupational Cancer. 7. Item on the Agenda Internat. labour off., geneva,1973 Control and prevention of occupational cancer ,1972 Cancer Prevention Programs in the Workplace Michael P. Eriksen,1987 Control and Prevention of Occupational Cancer, Seventh Item on the Agenda International Labour Office,1972 Occupational Cancer in Developing Countries Neil Pearce,1994 Cancers due to exposures in the workplace in developing countries have received little attention because of the overriding problems in those regions of communicable diseases poverty malnutrition vulnerability to natural disasters and war This book shows however that the global process of industrialization is resulting in increased exposures to occupational carcinogens in developing countries owing to unsafe technology bad working conditions ineffective legislation on occupational safety and health and inadequate supervision These factors are exacerbated by the fact that a workforce with generally poor health and nutritional status and which includes many women and children is more vulnerable to many diseases including cancer The transfer of hazardous industries and wastes from developed to developing countries is of particular concern This publication brings together all of the available published data on occupational cancer in developing countries and presents the results of a survey carried out at IARC on common occupational exposures and measures that have been taken to control them The overview indicates where information is lacking about the health effects of agents used in developing countries many of which are banned or restricted elsewhere

Cumulated Index Medicus ,1999 CONTROL AND PREVENTION OF OCCUPATIONAL CANCER : REPORT VII (1). ,1972 Annual Report National Cancer Institute (U.S.). Division of Cancer Prevention and Control,1983 Biomedical Index to PHS-supported Research ,1988 Biomedical Index to PHS-supported Research: pt. A. Subject access A-H ,1992 Cancer and Workplace Chemicals John H. Duffus,1995 Cancer Control ,1962 Convention, Proceedings of IAIABC International Association of Industrial Accident Boards and Commissions,1964
