

energetically, whether it is work, hobbies or school exams. They are so single-minded that they usually get what they want.

Mixed Hands

Some hands defy categorization, and will be a mixture of any of the types that we have already mentioned, or they may be in a class of their own. Basically, if the radial side is more developed, then the subject will be energetic in worldly matters, while if the ulna side is stronger, they are more home-loving and imaginative. A subject born with long fingers indicates a practical mind. Communication, discussion, etc., while a long square palm with short, coarse fingers denotes an enthusiastic quick-thinking and quick-acting person, who despite appearances has the application to finish what he starts and to make a good job of it.

Radial/Ulna Sides of the Hand (Fig. 2.12)

The radial side is the thumb side and the ulna side is the edge or the cushion side of the hand. Some palmsists use the system shown in Fig. 2.12a, others prefer the system as per Fig. 2.12b.

Radial (Fig. 2.12)

This is connected with the more personality. It could be termed more active and social, and of well-developed nature than the subject copes well with worldly affairs. A well-developed radial side makes the subject more in practical and businesslike, and who may be more materialistic, like a entrepreneur with any situation that requires initiative, leadership and a sense of personal authority. The subject will be naturally active, possibly rather demanding and will have a strong desire to live life to the fullest.

Ulna (Fig. 2.12)

This is connected with the more personality. Feminine, intuitive and sensitive. If this side is well developed, the subject is highly imaginative and may use this imagination as part of his work or to enrich his life. This person will be sympathetic. He will be gentle, caring and patient, and he will get on well with children and animals, and have a love of art, music and all creative work.

The Importance of Balance

In palmistry, everything depends on balance. Too much of one thing in a hand will cause that person to be overdeveloped in one area of life and lacking in some of the others. If a hand appears to be lopsided, then we suggest that you take a piece of paper and cover up half of the hand and see what you would have if the missing half looked the same as the half you can still see; then change halves. This can give an interesting picture of two people in one.

If the radial side is heavier, the subject will be active, competitive, materialistic, and capable in worldly matters but could find difficulty in expressing or understanding feelings. Too much ulna is rare but when it does occur, it implies a personality that is ardent with emotion and imagination, longing to be creative but lacking the drive to do so. Obviously the subject with a hand which is balanced and fairly even on both sides will not have either trait too strongly marked. If the hand is generally weak looking, then neither the assertive and capable nor the creative and sensitive side will be developed and a kind of general indifference will take over. If the hand is generally strong and firm then the personality has a nice balance between
