Language Teacher Identities Matthew Clarke, 2008 Set in the rapidly changing world of the contemporary United Arab Emirates and bringing together detailed linguistic analysis with cutting edge social theory this book explores the development of the first cohort of students to complete a new Bachelor of Education in English language teaching theorizing the students learning to teach in terms of the discursive construction of a teaching identity within an evolving community of practice Both a study of the influence of issues such as gender and nationalism in language teacher education in the Middle East as well as of the power of discourse and community in shaping identity this book will be of relevance to anyone working in teacher education as well as to those with an interest in theorizations of discourse and identity Bilingualism and the Construction of Ethnic Identity Among Chinese Americans in the San Francisco Bay Area Ashley Marie Williams,2006 Neo-colonial Mentalities in Contemporary Europe? Guido Rings,Anne E. Ife,2008 In the rapidly evolving context of contemporary Europe many citizens have previous experience of colonial or neo colonial forms of domination This raises questions about the impact of such experiences on the shaping of identities within an environment that is itself constantly evolving How do such people see themselves and their community How are they perceived What effect does this have on their integration into the wider European community This timely volume brings together a series of papers which explore such questions through the discourse relating to those people both self and other generated The originality of this book stems not only from its thematic focus but also from the multi national multi disciplinary background of the contributions which offer new interpretations and analyses in particular within a framework of post colonial and critical discourse theory Contributors from across Europe and North America bring perspectives from applied linguistics language and literary studies communication studies sociology and social psychology Primary texts examined include literature news media film political discourse both written and spoken and original interview data Language is observed both in its usage and for its participatory role in identity formation Three different groupings are identified for observation namely 1 migrant diasporas originating from the traditional areas of European colonisation in Africa and Asia 2 citizens of newer member states of the European Union including former Soviet satellite states like Latvia or aspiring members like Turkey and 3 a number of regional groups Irish Welsh whose relationship with the central government shares neo colonial characteristics The book is intended for all those interested in understanding the factors influencing the rapidly evolving character of Europe and its populations and is intended to form a platform for future exploration and research in this area Encyclopedia of Language and Education Nancy H. Hornberger,2007-11-20 In this second fully revised edition the 10 volume Encyclopedia of Language and Education offers the newest developments including two new volumes of research and scholarly content essential to the field of language teaching and learning in the age of globalization In the selection of topics and contributors the Encyclopedia reflects the depth of disciplinary knowledge breadth of interdisciplinary perspective and diversity of sociogeographic experience in the field Throughout there is an inclusion of contributions from non English speaking and non western parts of the world providing truly global coverage The Acquisition of Sociolinguistic Competence in a Study Abroad Context Vera Regan,Martin Howard,Isabelle Lemée,2009 Drawing on cross sectional and longitudinal analyses of a range of sociolinguistic variables in L2 French this volume explores the relationship between study abroad and the acquisition of sociolinguistic variation patterns by the advanced second language learner Developing Identities Massimiliano Spotti,2008-08 At present western European societies are at the same time facing the aftermath of massive immigration movements and the challenges of new globalization waves Education is at the heart of this twofold experience On the one hand it is confronted with the demand of developing a canon for national identity construction On the other hand it is held responsible for the pupils emancipation in a globalizing society As a consequence teachers and pupils are challenged to deal with identity issues in their everyday classroom realities In politics the media and the educational field much has been said and done regarding immigrant minority pupils identities and their socio cultural and linguistic integration Still little is known about how identities are actually constructed and developed in the discourses of those who make up the primary school classroom This book reports on two ethnographic case studies carried out in multicultural classrooms in a Dutch and Flemish primary school It portrays the discourses and the interactions class teachers and their twelve year old pupils are engaged in on a daily basis In depth analyses are presented of the institutional discourses which the classrooms are part of and of the teachers and pupils discourses and their mutual relationships In both classrooms the analysis shows that pupils identities are constructed by the institutions and their teachers on the basis of their language behaviour and their presupposed belonging to a homogeneous cultural and or religious group The analysis at the same time makes clear that teachers have started questioning their understanding of immigrant minority pupils identities It further shows that the pupils under investigation are by no means passive objects of identity ascription Rather they appear as active and capable multilingual and multicultural stockbrokers ready and willing to invest in the linguistic and cultural currency that ensures the highest return on investment
