Negro And Organized Labor The:

The Negro and Organized Labor F. Ray Marshall, 1965 Black and trade unions in the USA Discrimination formal or informal exclusion segregated locals etc Factors influencing employment opportunities Government policy in this field employment policy and related labour legislation Statistical tables References Black Americans and Organized Labor Paul D. Moreno, 2008-01-01 In Black Americans and Organized Labor Paul D Moreno offers a bold reinterpretation of the role of race and racial discrimination in the American labor movement Moreno applies insights of the law and economics movement to formulate a powerfully compelling labor race theorem of elegant simplicity White unionists found that race was a convenient basis on which to do what unions do control the labor supply Not racism pure and simple but the economics of discrimination explains historic black absence and under representation in unions Moreno s sweeping reexamination stretches from the antebellum period to the present integrating principal figures such as Frederick Douglass and Samuel Gompers Isaac Myers and Booker T Washington and W E B Du Bois and A Philip Randolph He traces changing attitudes and practices during the simultaneous black migration to the North and consolidation of organized labor s power through the confusing and conflicted post World War II period during the course of the civil rights movement and into the era of affirmative action Maneuvering across a wide span of time and a broad array of issues Moreno brings remarkable clarity to the question of the importance of race in unions He impressively weaves together labor policy and African American history into a cogent persuasive revisionist study that cannot be ignored The Negro and the American Labor Movement Julius Jacobson, 1968 Study of the extent and nature of Black participation in trade union activities in the USA covers union conservatism the attitudes of negro leadership historical aspects views of various unions intergroup relations negro unemployment discrimination income distribution legal aspects of union practices etc References and notes pp 401 to 426

Rudwick, 1971 Organized Labor and the Negro Herbert Roof Northrup, 1971 Black Unionism in the Industrial South Ernest Obadele-Starks, 2000 Obadele Starks eloquently captures these workers fight and discusses the implications of their struggle on the industrial society of the Upper Texas Gulf Coast today Students and scholars of American labor history race relations and Texas history will find Black Unionism in the Industrial South a valuable scholarly work Jacket Organized Labor and the Black Worker, 1619-1981 Philip Sheldon Foner, 1982 Negro Organized Labor Ray Marshall, 1965 The Black Worker Sterling Denhard Spero, Abram Lincoln Harris, 1931 Organized Labor and the Black Worker , 1967 The Integration of the Negro Into Organized Labor Solomon Arbeiter, 1959 "Negro Laborers to the Crossroads" Zachary Andrew Montz, 2013 On July 2 1964 the members of the all black Independent Metal Workers Local 2 at the Hughes Tool Company in Houston Texas struck a major blow for the rights of black workers by securing an order from the National Labor Relations Board prohibiting their employer and all white IMW Local 1 from practicing racial discrimination in union membership policies and in company contracts The NLRB decision set a national precedent in favor of racial equality in industrial employment It was the culmination of three decades of effort by black oil and steel workers in and around Houston to use the institutions of organized labor unions federal labor agencies and labor law to secure substantive economic gains and equality of opportunity rights and treatment at work The long fight against employment discrimination in Houston met opposition both from employers and from white workers reluctant to surrender their positions of marginal privilege It also split the city's black community on the labor question Groups of black workers civil rights activists lawyers and community leaders battled over fundamental issues of strategy and over the proper relationship between black workers and the labor movement their white counterparts and employers There were two broad factions one committed to a social democratic vision of working class advance through the biracial unions of the CIO the other mistrustful of white workers and labor leaders favorably disposed towards employers and dedicated to promoting black self determination and autonomy through independent labor organizations Drawing upon the records of unions the NAACP and the federal labor bureaucracy as well as Houston's black newspapers this dissertation pays particular attention to the many mid level organizers and activists involved in union campaigns in the 1930s and 1940s and charts the turn towards the courts and the NLRB in the 1950s and 1960s as black workers disappointed with the labor movement fought to secure their rights In doing so it aims both to explore the relationship between black workers and organized labor and to assess the strengths and shortcomings of biracial movements democratic institutions and the law as means for promoting equality
