Networking For Development:

Networking for Development Paul Starkey, International Forum for Rural Transport and Development, 1998

Networking for Development Paul Starkey, 1997 This concise practical manual is in two parts. The first part discusses the benefits and problems of networks in general and the second gives a more detailed case study of animal traction networks in Africa. The well-connected community Gilchrist, Alison, 2009-07-22 Since the publication of the first edition of The well connected community there has been a growing recognition in practice and policy of how networks contribute to the vitality of community life and civil society. Government policy has increasingly emphasised the need to involve communities in decision making while social capital is increasingly associated with health, low levels of crime, educational achievement and a strong sense of community. The well connected community aims to strengthen and extend informal networks, support partnership working across boundaries and promote social cohesion. It explores the concept of community in relation to patterns of interaction, social identity and mutual influence, advocating a new model of community development that promotes networking as a skilled and strategic intervention and providing recommendations for good networking practice. This fully updated second edition includes new ideas drawn from recent research on social capital and the policy context for community practice, reflecting the increasing emphasis on community engagement and empowerment. Recent case studies and examples have been added throughout. The well connected community is aimed at practitioners, trainers, policy makers and managers working with communities or responsible for community participation strategies both in the UK and internationally. Academics will also find it a useful source for teaching and research.

Networking - Its Role and Value Within Local Development Area Development Management Ltd, 1999 Airline Network Development in Europe and its Implications for Airport Planning Guillaume Burghouwt, 2016-03-23 The ongoing deregulation and liberalization of worldwide air transport markets confronts airport planners with an increasingly problematic context. On the one hand the capital intensive, large scale and complex airport investments need a detailed long medium term planning of airport infrastructure. Such planning requires at least predictable traffic volumes and traffic composition within the planning horizon. On the other hand, airline route networks are increasingly dynamic structures that frequently show discontinuous changes. As a consequence, the much more volatile airport traffic restricts the value of detailed traffic forecasts. Volatility of airport traffic and its composition requires flexibility of airport strategies and planning processes. The book explores this dilemma through a detailed study of airline network development, airport connectivity and airport planning in the deregulated EU air transport market. The questions the book seeks to answer are: how have airlines responded to the regime changes in EU aviation with respect to the configuration of their route networks; what has been the impact of the reconfiguration of airline network configurations for the connectivity of EU airports; how can airport planners and airport authorities deal with the increasingly uncertain airline network behaviour in Europe Networking K. V.
