Models for the Perception of Speech and Visual Form Weiant Wathen-Dunn, 1967 Models for the Perception of Speech and Visual Form, 1970 Models For The Perception Of Speech And Visual Form (proc.) boston, 11-14 Nov. 1964

Vathen Weiant, Language Development and Neurological Theory Sidney J. Segalowitz, Frederic A. Gruber, 2014-05-10

Language Development and Neurological Theory presents a neuropsychological theory of language development The discussions are organized around the following themes cerebral specialization for language in normal and brain damaged individuals development of cerebral dominance and speech perception Much emphasis is placed on the issue of cerebral specialization or lateralization Comprised of 20 chapters this volume begins with a review of some of the methods used to correlate neurophysiological and behavioral functions as well as some of the issues involved in trying to unite the empirical science of neuropsychology and the rationalist science of linguistics The next chapter deals with lateralization for speech sounds shown by young infants and possible factors in the sound signal responsible for the differentiation Subsequent chapters focus on asymmetries in young children during continuous verbal nonvisual and visual nonverbal story tasks the effects of multi language elementary school program on the degree of lateralization for language intramodal and cross modal pattern perception in stroke patients with lateralized lesions and visual half field asymmetries in deaf and hearing children Several hypotheses as to why language is lateralized to the left hemisphere rather than to the right are also examined This book is addressed to researchers and students of the neuropsychology of language whether they call themselves psychologists neuropsychologists neurologists or linguists Cognitive Theory F. Restle, 2018-12-07 First published in 1982 This book contains the content of the Indiana Conference of 1974 This Conference has met for each of the last seven years At one time it was known as the Midwestern Mathematical Psychology Meeting but as interest drifted toward more experimental and theoretical but less purely mathematical work the title became the Indiana Theoretical and Cognitive Psychology Meetings The contributors to this Conference were requested to emphasize the relatively broad theoretical significance of their work to incorporate the work of others and if they were willing to speculate about future developments perception involving airjet stimulators and a computer controlled facility are given In the first study alphabetic shapes were presented on an 8x6 airjet array that was translated in a small circle The increased performance with movement suggests a hypothetical model that qualitatively accounts for the display motion effects The second study involved pairs of alphabetic shapes presented in rapid succession at the same anatomical location The interaction effects were increased letter reversals for short interstimulus intervals more first response errors for short stimulus onset intervals and more second response errors for long stimulus intervals a crossover in first and second response error rates of 100 to 200 msec after onset of the first stimulus In the third study point airjet stimuli were applied simultaneously to the 24 interjoint regions of the fingers The results suggest a tactile short term memory with greater capacity than immediate memory span but with 0.8 sec decay rate In the fourth study visual and tactile stimuli giving equal mean simple reaction times were used With increased response alternatives mean visual times increased less than mean tactile times but with simultaneous presentation of both stimulus types mean reaction time was much shorter than with either type alone
