    Modeling Cities and Regions as Complex Systems Roger White,Guy Engelen,Inge Uljee,2015-09-11 The theory and practice of modeling cities and regions as complex self organizing systems presenting widely used cellular automata based models theoretical discussions and applications Cities and regions grow or occasionally decline and continuously transform themselves as they do so This book describes the theory and practice of modeling the spatial dynamics of urban growth and transformation As cities are complex adaptive self organizing systems the most appropriate modeling framework is one based on the theory of self organizing systems an approach already used in such fields as physics and ecology The book presents a series of models most of them developed using cellular automata CA which are inherently spatial and computationally efficient It also provides discussions of the theoretical methodological and philosophical issues that arise from the models A case study illustrates the use of these models in urban and regional planning Finally the book presents a new dynamic theory of urban spatial structure that emerges from the models and their applications The models are primarily land use models but the more advanced ones also show the dynamics of population and economic activities and are integrated with models in other domains such as economics demography and transportation The result is a rich and realistic representation of the spatial dynamics of a variety of urban phenomena The book is unique in its coverage of both the general issues associated with complex self organizing systems and the specifics of designing and implementing models of such systems Planning Problems of Town, City, and Region ,1917 Usefulness of the Model Cities Program to the Elderly United States. Congress. Senate. Special Committee on Aging,1968 Urban Agriculture for Growing City Regions Undine Giseke,Maria Gerster-Bentaya,Frank Helten,Matthias Kraume,Dieter Scherer,Guido Spars,Fouad Amraoui,Abdelaziz Adidi,Said Berdouz,Mohemed Chlaida,Majid Mansour,Mohamed Mdafai,2015-09-07 This book demonstrates how agriculture can play a determining role in integrated climate optimised urban development Agriculture within urban growth centres today is more than an economic or social left over or a niche practice It is instead a complex system that offers multiple potentials for interaction with the urban system Urban open space and agriculture can be linked to a productive green infrastructure this forms new urban rural linkages in the urbanizing region and helps shape the city But in order to do this agriculture has to be seen as an integral part of the urban fabric and it has to be put on the local agenda Urban Agriculture for Growing City Regions takes the example of Casablanca one of the fastest growing cities in North Africa to investigate this approach The creation of synergies between the urban and rural in an emerging megacity is demonstrated through pilot projects design solutions and multifunctional modules These synergies assure greater resource efficiency particularly regarding the use and reuse of water and they strengthen regional food security and the social integration of multiple spheres A transdisciplinary research approach brings together different scientific disciplines and local actors into a process of integrated knowledge production The book will have a long lasting legacy and is essential reading for researchers planners practitioners and policy makers who are working on urban development and urban agricultural strategies Planning Problems of Town, City and Region International Federation for Housing and Town Planning. Congress,1925 Federal Register ,1969-02 An Introductory Guide to EC Competition Law and Practice Valentine Korah,1994 The Science of Cities and Regions Alan Wilson,2012-01-05 A science of cities and regions is critical for meeting future challenges The world is urbanising huge cities are being created and are continuing to grow rapidly There are many planning and development issues arising in different manifestations in countries across the globe These developments can in principle be simulated through mathematical computer models which provide tools for forecasting and testing future scenarios and plans These models can represent the functioning of cities and regions predicting the spatial demography and the economy the main flows such as journey to work or to services and the mechanisms of future evolution In this book the main principles involved in the design of this range of models are articulated providing an account of the current state of the art as well as future research challenges Alan Wilson has over forty years working with urban and regional models and has contributed important discoveries He has distilled this experience into what serves as both an introduction and a review of the research
