Neravnodushnaia Priroda:

Harmony and Dissent R. Bruce Elder, 2008-10-02 R Bruce Elder argues that the authors of many of the manifestoes that announced in such lively ways the appearance of yet another artistic movement shared a common aspiration they proposed to reformulate the visual literary and performing arts so that they might take on attributes of the cinema The cinema Elder argues became in the early decades of the twentieth century a pivotal artistic force around which a remarkable variety and number of aesthetic forms took shape To demonstrate this Elder begins with a wide ranging discussion that opens up some broad topics concerning modernity's cognitive and perceptual regime with a view to establishing that a crisis within that regime engendered some peculiar and highly questionable epistemological beliefs and enthusiasms Through this discussion Elder advances the startling claim that a crisis of cognition precipitated by modernity engendered by way of response a peculiar sort of pneumatic spiritual epistemology Elder then shows that early ideas of the cinema were strongly influenced by this pneumatic epistemology and uses this conception of the cinema to explain its pivotal role in shaping two key moments in early twentieth century art the quest to bring forth a pure objectless non representational art and Russian Suprematism Constructivism and Productivism Russian Literature Triquarterly, 1989 Chingiz Aitmatov and the Poetics of Moral Prose Joseph P. Mozur, 1985 Realism After Modernism Devin Fore, 2012 The human figure made a spectacular return in visual art and literature in the 1920s Following modernism's withdrawal nonobjective painting gave way to realistic depictions of the body and experimental literary techniques were abandoned for novels with powerfully individuated characters But the celebrated return of the human in the interwar years was not as straightforward as it may seem In Realism after Modernism Devin Fore challenges the widely accepted view that this period represented a return to traditional realist representation and its humanist postulates Interwar realism he argues did not reinstate its nineteenth century predecessor but invoked realism as a strategy of mimicry that anticipates postmodernist pastiche Through close readings of a series of works by German artists and writers of the period Fore investigates five artistic devices that were central to interwar realism He analyzes Bauhaus polymath L szl Moholy Nagy's use of linear perspective three industrial novels riven by the conflict between the temporality of capital and that of labor Brecht's socialist realist plays which explore new dramaturgical principles for depicting a collective subject a memoir by Carl Einstein that oscillates between recollection and self erasure and the idiom of physiognomy in the photomontages of John Heartfield Fore's readings reveal that each of these rehumanized works in fact calls into question the very categories of the human upon which realist figuration is based Paradoxically even as the human seemed to make a triumphal return in the culture of the interwar period the definition of the human and the integrity of the body were becoming more tenuous than ever before Interwar realism did not hearken back to earlier artistic modes but posited new and unfamiliar syntaxes of aesthetic encounter revealing the emergence of a human subject quite unlike anything that had come before Compromising Kino Vincent Bohlinger, 2007 Semiotics of Narration in Film and Prose Fiction Benjamin Rifkin, 1994 The dissertation concludes with evaluations of each filmmaker's transformation of the literary text his use of the medium of film to convey messages which may be at variance with those conveyed by the literary text the aesthetic success or failure of each of the filmic texts on the basis of the filmmaker's approach to the literary text and the usefulness of this model in such studies Dostoevsky and Soviet Film N.
