means to respond not only to the actual needs but also to highlight the opportunities and the utilities and to investigate whether society is increasingly relational or just perceived as such as e.g. digital social networks and related concepts exemplify. From a strictly scientific perspective to answer the question how to read society as a network means to ask ourselves if the conceptual categories especially the concepts of structure and exchange and the paradigms of traditional analysis holism and individualism both in the functionalist and the conflictive versions are still sufficient b if new conceptual categories theories instruments are needed to represent more properly the reality we face to investigate it to explain it or at least to understand it. Starting from a reflection on already established social networks Scott 2003 the fundamental differences between groups and networks Vergati 2008 the logics of networks Serra 2003 as well as social capital formation and links Di Nicola 2006 Mutti 1998 we seize the spatial dynamics seemingly following opposite paths but which revert to a common denominator de spatialization and re spatialization namely the processes of dematerialization of space s and its reconstruction by specific relational dynamics and forms. The study of networks is therefore not attributable to a single theory but to several theories converging towards a unique perspective spaces and logical reasoning Serra 2001 each one with its own uniqueness. The strength of this volume and the difference with respect to other attempts at explaining the Network Society lies in the multidimensional and interrelated perspectives it offers emerging from converging multidisciplinary perspectives sociological anthropological and linguistic and from applications that the Network Society provides namely international European Governance institutional public linguistic landscape of the city of Rome and mediated ones communication technology.

The Network Society L. Albrechts, Seymour J. Mandelbaum, 2005 Essential reading for graduate level courses in urban studies city and regional planning and urban design Albrecht and Mandelbaum s text examines the challenges that the new paradigm of the Network Society create for Urban and Regional Planning Connected, Or, What it Means to Live in the Network Society Steven Shaviro, 2003 Connected is made up of a series of mini essays on cyberpunk hip hop film noir Web surfing greed electronic surveillance pervasive multimedia psychedelic drugs artificial intelligence evolutionary psychology and the architecture of Frank Gehry among other things Shaviro argues that our strange new world is increasingly being transformed in ways and by devices that seem to come out of the pages of science fiction even while the world itself is becoming a futuristic landscape. The result is that science fiction provides the most useful social theory the only form that manages to be as radical as reality itself. Connected looks at how our networked environment has manifested itself in the work of J G Ballard William S Burroughs Philip K Dick William Gibson K W Jeter and others. Shaviro focuses on science fiction not only as a form of cultural commentary but also as a prescient forum in which to explore the forces that are morphing our world into a sort of virtual reality game. Original and compelling Connected shows how the continual experimentation of science fiction like science and technology themselves conjures the invisible social and economic forces that surround us.

Community Practice in the Network Society Peter Day, Doug Schuler, 2004-06-11 Around the world citizens in local communities are utilising ICTs to underpin the creation of a participatory and democratic vision of the network society Embedded in the richness and diversity of community practice a vision of a civil network society is emerging A society where ICTs are harnessed as tools to improve the quality of life and reflect the diversity of social networks where people are viewed as citizens not just as consumers and where heterogeneity is perceived as a strength rather than a weakness Community Practice in the Network Society looks at the broad context in which this is happening presents case studies of local projects from around the world and discusses community ICT research methodologies Not only does it highlight the symbiotic relationship between community ICT practice and research but it also provides evidence supporting the case for the development of more inclusive and participatory pathways to the network society

The Concept of the Network Society Niels Lehmann, 2007 Our current society has been called a network society But what lies behind this name Has society changed or has our observation of society There can hardly be any doubt that the conditions for describing the world have changed Since the turn of the 20th century at least we have known that there is no point for observing the world that lies outside the world This book reflects the consequences of these conditions for observing society What significance does the loss of metaphysical guarantees have for the description and understanding of the society in which we live and for the epistemological tools at our disposal The book is a sociological philosophical and aesthetical study of what lies behind the idea of calling present day society a network society
