More Classic Trains Arthur Detmers Dubin,1974      Trains ,1962      More Classic American Railroads Mike Schafer,2000 A groundbreaking new book that upends our understanding of ancient America Conventional history tells us humans migrated on foot across present day Alaska populating the Americas far later than other continents However emerging new evidence suggests seafarers reached the continents thousands of years earlier and developed far more sophisticated civilizations than previously imagined From distinguished historian BBC World Service Gavin Menzies the author of the blockbuster New York Times bestseller 1421 comes a revolutionary new account of how the first humans came to North and South America Menzies reveals that ancient peoples used the oceans natural currents and prevailing winds to make voyages across both the Atlantic and Pacific What's more we now must accept that they had time to develop remarkably advanced cultures Armed with cutting edge DNA evidence newly unearthed artifacts and astonishing linguistic and archaeological discoveries Menzies shows humans have been making transoceanic voyages as far back as 100 000 years ago vastly predating the supposed overland migration to the Americas during the last Ice Age the ancient South American civilizations of the Olmec and Maya in Central and South America may have had direct origins and influences from Asia ancient maps held in the Library of Congress in Washington D C show there must have been sustained and dedicated voyages to the Western Hemisphere by Chinese explorers as early as 2200 B C huge Chinese settlements occupied and made exploratory journeys from Nova Scotia Japanese Korean and even earlier European voyages likewise predated the explorations currently recorded by history A maverick scholar Menzies has made a riveting new contribution to the story of humanity's earliest explorers revealing the truth behind one of history's most fascinating questions Who discovered America

The completion and sale of High Speed 1 Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Committee of Public Accounts,2012-07-06 The high speed railway linking London to the Channel Tunnel known as High Speed 1 has now been fully open for almost five years and has had a good performance record There have also been some costly mistakes The Department originally expected London Continental Railways Limited LCR to service the project debt from future revenues from Eurostar UK However by the end of 1997 revenues were substantially below LCR's forecasts Consequently in 1998 the Department agreed to restructure the deal and guarantee most of LCR's debt The taxpayer is now servicing and repaying the project debt of 4.8 billion Passenger demand for international services on the line has been much lower than forecast and that is the root cause of the failure of the original deal Planning assumptions failed to properly consider the impact on passenger numbers of the growth of low cost airlines and the competitive response of ferry companies The Department still does not have plans in place to evaluate fully the impact of HS1 Total taxpayer support for the line over a 60 year period to 2070 has an estimated present value of 10.2 billion Benefits for passengers from shorter journey times over this period have an estimated present value of 7 billion The basis of this cost benefit analysis however is open to challenge Also the Department will need to evaluate HS1's regeneration benefits and wider economic impacts worth many billions of pounds if the project is to demonstrate value for money The Department must also learn the lessons as it develops its plans for HS2
