distribution of restoration roughly matches what occurred in 1994 As in real life the areas experiencing longer outages in the model are mainly in the north of the system service area or around the San Fernando Valley The system restoration curves did not match exactly as the range of outputs from all 10 runs of the restoration model shows that the restoration occurs too quickly especially during the first day after the earthquake Possible future model modifications that may improve the calibration are discussed Abstract Great and Small Game of Africa Henry Anderson Bryden,1899
