Miracle In East Harlem The Fight For Choice In Public Education:

Miracle in East Harlem Seymour Fliegel, James MacGuire, 1993 Through this heartwarming real life success story Fliegel and James MacGuire make a convincing case for public school choice. They show that if it can happen in East Harlem it can happen anywhere.

Controlling Public Education Kathryn A. McDermott, 1999 Most Americans believe that local school districts are the only means by which citizens may exercise control over public education. Kathryn McDermott argues to the contrary that existing local institutions are no longer sufficient for achieving either equity or democratic governance. Not only is local control inequitable it also fails to live up to its reputation for guaranteeing public participation and citizen influence. Drawing upon democratic theory and the results of field research in New Haven Connecticut and three suburbs McDermott contends that our educational system can be made more democratic by centralizing control over funding while decentralizing most authority over schools to the level of schools themselves while enacting public school choice controlled for racial balance. To many people in Connecticut and elsewhere the tension between equal opportunity for all students and local control of public education seems impossible to resolve. In 1996 the Connecticut Supreme Court ruled in Sheff v O'Neill that local control produces unconstitutional segregation of public schools. Nearly all of the state's 169 towns operate their own public schools and like the towns they serve the schools are generally homogeneous with respect to race and socioeconomic class. In the Sheff ruling the court declared that making school districts coterminous with town lines is the single most important factor contributing to the present concentration of racial and ethnic minorities in the Hartford public school system. At the same time the court also acknowledged that the town based school system presently furthers the legitimate nonracial interests of permitting considerable local control and accountability in educational matters. In Connecticut and elsewhere it has often seemed necessary to choose between local control and equity in public education and local control has almost always won. McDermott argues that rather than seeing local control and equity as conflicting goals policymakers should regard them as equally important components of democracy in public education. In her view a truly democratic system of education should both encourage citizen participation in school governance and contribute to the formation and maintenance of a social order in which equality of opportunity prevails over hierarchies of privilege. Centralizing distribution of resources and using controlled choice to end racial isolation would provide greater equality of opportunity while decentralizing management of schools would expand citizen participation. McDermott's conclusions break new ground in our understanding of local school governance itself and call into question the conventional wisdom about local participation. These findings should interest those who study school governance and reform especially in an urban setting as well as policy makers, administrators, teachers, students and citizens eager to improve their schools.

Lies (and the Lying Liars Who Tell Them) Al Franken, 2004-08-05 Al Franken one of America's savviest satirists has been studying the rhetoric of the Right He has listened to their cries of slander bias and even treason He has examined the Bush administration's policies of squandering our surplus ravaging the environment and alienating the rest of the world He's even watched Fox News A lot And in this fair and balanced report Al bravely exposes them all for what they are liars Lying lying liars

and Social Controversy Stephen D. Sugarman, Frank R. Kemerer, 1999 In this important new volume distinguished legal and public policy scholars address issues that are critical to the successful drafting and implementation of school choice programs yet are usually overlooked in the choice debate They explore whether school choice is a threat or an opportunity to the many children who are largely deprived of choice today and they offer a variety of perspectives with some authors enthusiastic others more skeptical The book begins with a discussion of the types and extent of school choice what is known about its consequences and how politics has influenced its development It then focuses on three important public policy issues how school choice can revolutionize the way schools are financed what policy interventions are necessary to increase the supply of choice schools and how choice programs can be held accountable to parents and the state without undermining institutional autonomy The book addresses legal issues including whether public and private choice schools will be required to observe student and teacher rights generally recognized in traditional public schools how the religion and speech clauses of the First Amendment may affect the participation of religious schools in school choice programs whether school choice will enhance or aggravate opportunities for racial justice what the implications of school choice are for teacher unions and collective bargaining and whether children with disabilities will be accommodated in school choice programs under federal disability law Throughout the book the authors offer recommendations for public policy development The contributors are Jeffrey Henig Robert Bulman and David L Kirp Paul T Hill Robert M O Neil Jesse H Choper Betsy Levin William G Buss and Laura F Rothstein Stephen D Sugarman is Agnes Roddy Robb Professor of Law at the University of California Berkeley Frank R Kemerer is Regents Professor and director of the Center for the Study of Education Reform at the University of North Texas
