Mismanaged Trade:

Mismanaged Trade? Kenneth Flamm, 2010-12-01 The semiconductor industry is at the forefront of current tensions over international trade and investment in high technology industries. This book traces the struggle between US and Japanese semiconductor producers from its origins in the 1950s to the novel experiment with managed trade embodied in the US-Japan Semiconductor Trade Arrangements of 1986 and the current debate over continuation of elements of that agreement. Flamm provides a thorough analysis of this experiment and its consequences for US semiconductor producers and users and presents extensive discussion of patterns of competition within the semiconductor industry. Using a wealth of new data he argues that a fundamentally new trade regime for high technology industries is needed to escape from the present impasse. He lays out the alternatives from laissez faire to managed trade and argues strongly for a new set of international ground rules to regulate acceptable behavior by government and firms in high tech industries. Flamm's detailed analysis of competition within the semiconductor industry will be of great value to those interested in the industrial organization of high technology industries as well as those concerned with trade and technology policy, international competition and Japanese industrial policies.

Failure to Adjust Edward Alden, 2017-09-15 Americans know that something has gone wrong in this country's effort to prosper in the face of growing global economic competition. The vast benefits promised by the supporters of globalization and by their own government have never materialized for most Americans. This book is the story of what went wrong and how to correct the course. It is a compelling history of the last four decades of US economic and trade policies that have left Americans unable to adapt to or compete in the current global marketplace. Failure to Adjust argues that despite the deep partisan divisions over how best to respond to America's competitive challenges there is achievable common ground on such issues as fostering innovation, overhauling tax rules to encourage investment in the United States, boosting graduation rates, investing in infrastructure and streamlining regulations. The federal government needs to become more like US state governments in embracing economic competitiveness as a central function of government. The book presents an especially timely analysis of the trade policies of the Obama administration and discusses how America can reassert itself as the leader in setting rules for international economic competition that would spread the benefits of global trade and investment more broadly.

Behavioral Norms, Technological Progress, and Economic Dynamics Ernst Helmstädter, Mark Perlman, 1996 Schumpeter was interested in dynamic economics rather than the economics of stagnation in the economics of the creation of wealth rather than the economics of the redistribution of wealth in the economics of technological innovation rather than the economics of industrial management. The major thrust of the volume then concerns studies of industrial change with emphasis both on analysis of the impact of innovation and on the interrelatedness of industries viewed through the process of innovation.
