The Elusive Embryo Gay Becker, 2000-12-20 In the first book to examine the industry of reproductive technology from the perspective of the consumer Gay Becker scrutinizes the staggering array of medical options available to women and men with fertility problems and assesses the toll both financial and emotional that the quest for a biological child often exacts from would be parents Becker interviewed hundreds of people over a period of years their stories are presented here in their own words Absorbing informative and in many cases moving these stories address deep seated notions about gender self worth and the cultural ideal of biological parenthood Becker moves beyond people s personal experiences to examine contemporary meanings of technology and the role of consumption in modern life What emerges is a clear view of technology as culture with technology the template on which issues such as gender nature and the body are being rewritten and continuously altered The Elusive Embryo chronicles the history and development of reproductive technology and shows how global forces in consumer culture have contributed to the industry s growth Becker examines how increasing use of reproductive technology has changed ideas about natural pregnancy and birth Discussing topics such as in vitro fertilization how men and women naturalize the use of a donor and what happens when new reproductive technologies don't work Becker shows how the experience of infertility has become increasingly politicized as potential parents confront the powerful forces that shape this industry The Elusive Embryo is accessible well written and well documented It will be an invaluable resource for people using or considering new reproductive technologies as well as for social scientists and health professionals Spirits of Palestine Celia E.

emergence of the contemporary native Hawaiian nationalist movement has shaped identity formation among Hawai'i's multi ethnic population My research results draw on twenty two months of ethnographic fieldwork on the island of Oahu and incorporate a combination of life narratives participant observation legal interpretation statistical data and textual analysis I argue that in the face of indigenous activism land has become important to identity formation and cultural production for not only native Hawaiians but also many non native residents of Hawai'i I show that the mutual constitution of indigenous and non indigenous identities in Hawai'i influences both everyday practice and memories about the past For example I show that cultural practices deemed in anthropological literature and popular social narratives as self defining for indigenous peoples such as traditional agricultural work and native language acquisition can hold deep personal meaning for non native people as well Further examining collective memory in Hawai'i I suggest that changing cultural political and economic contexts influence the way history is remembered Specifically through ethnographies of public spaces intended to celebrate diverse ethnic migrations to Hawai'i I argue that at distinct historical moments certain stories from the past become critical to the ability of local residents to develop a sense of belonging in the present
