Mink Trapping: A Book of Instruction Giving Many Methods of Trapping A. R. Harding, 2021-04-25 In Mink Trapping A Book of Instruction Giving Many Methods of Trapping A R Harding offers an exhaustive exploration of both traditional and innovative techniques in the art of mink trapping. The book is a meticulous blend of detailed instructional content and illustrative narratives drawing upon Harding's extensive field experience to present the reader with practical advice, safety tips, and ethical considerations. Written in a clear and accessible style, the text serves as an essential guide amidst the backdrop of early 20th century American wildlife management practices resonating with both amateur trappers and seasoned professionals alike. A R Harding, an avid outdoorsman and skilled trapper, was deeply influenced by the burgeoning interest in wildlife conservation and sustainable practices of his time. His personal experiences in the field combined with a passion for preserving the wilderness led him to document effective trapping methods that promote responsible stewardship of the environment. This book stands as a testament to Harding's commitment to education and ethical outdoor practices, offering a window into the wisdom of traditional trapping knowledge. This work is highly recommended for anyone interested in wildlife management, outdoor sports, or sustainable practices. Harding's thorough approach not only instructs readers on practical techniques but also invites them to consider their role in the ecosystem. Whether you are a novice or an experienced trapper, this book is a valuable resource that enriches your understanding of this fascinating endeavor.

Mink Trapping A. R. Harding, 2020-07-31 Reproduction of the original Mink Trapping by A R Harding Mink Trapping A. Harding, 2014-09-04 Mink are found in nearly all parts of America living along creeks, rivers, lakes, and ponds. While strictly speaking they are not a water animal, yet their traveling for food and otherwise is mainly near the water so that the trapper finds this the best place to set his traps. The mink is fond of fish, rabbit, squirrel, birds, mice, etc. In some sections they eat muskrat, but we believe they prefer other animals, only eating muskrat when very hungry and other game is scarce. At certain seasons, scent seems to attract them, while at other times the flesh of the rabbit, bird, or fish will attract them. The trapper who makes mink trapping a business should have various kinds of traps and sets for them, such as steel traps, both bait and blind sets, as well as deadfalls. Mink while small are quite strong for their size and very active. While a No 0 Newhouse will hold them, the No 1 is usually considered the proper trap. As already mentioned, mink travel a great deal near water so that the place to catch them is close to the water or in the water. If you notice mink tracks near the water in some narrow place where the bank comes nearly to the water or a rock or log projects nearly to the water, carefully dig a hole the size of your trap and an inch or more deep, covering with a large leaf or a piece of paper first. Then place a thin layer of earth removed over leaf or paper, making the set look as natural as before. The dirt from the hole for trap as taken out should be thrown in the water or to one side. One of the great secrets in mink trapping, especially blind sets, is to leave things as near as possible as they were before the set was made. There are various shades of mink, some quite dark, others brown, pale, and some cotton. The greater number, however, are brown In the Northeast Maine etc mink are not large but the color is rather dark In the same latitude some ten or twelve hundred miles west in Minnesota and Manitoba Canada mink are larger but not so dark Still further west on the coast of Washington mink are again smaller being somewhat similar in size to the Maine mink but much lighter in color Throughout the central section such as Ohio Indiana Illinois Iowa etc they are larger than the Maine mink but smaller than Minnesota In color not near so dark as the Eastern or Maine mink Mink Trapping A. A. Harding,2016-10-30 While there are some excellent mink trappers no one man has studied out all the methods for the conditions under which the trapper in the South makes his largest catches would probably be of little value to the trapper of the Far North where snow covers the ground the greater part of the year Conditions along the Atlantic are different than the Pacific and as well the methods used by thousands of trappers along the Mississippi and its tributaries differ from the Eastern or Western Coast trapper for the mink s food is not the same along the fresh inland waters as the coast or salt water The methods published are from all parts of the country and many experienced trappers tell of their best methods so that it makes no difference in what part of America you live something will be found of how to trap in your section Most of the articles are taken from those published in the H T T with slight correction A R HARDING Mink Trapping A.R
