J. Fletcher Williams, The recounting of events which have transpired in our own neighborhood is the most interesting of all history There is a fascination in the study of the intermingled fact and fiction of the past which is heightened by a familiarity with the localities described The river which flows through our native village acquires a new interest when in imagination we see the Indian canoe on its surface and the skin covered tepee on its banks as in days of yore Log cabins straw roofs and the rude betterments of the hardy pioneer are the next changes on the scene followed soon by mushroom towns some of which perish as quickly as they spring up while others astonish us by their rapid growth cities are built and moss and ivy the evidences of age o soon accumulate The purpose of this book is to present these pictures in their natural succession arousing the enthusiasm of the reader if possible giving him a more vigorous enjoyment of the present by linking if with the past The compass of this work is wide extending over a long period of time embracing the accounts of early explorers also reaching back among the legends of the past and approaching the events of today In the end it leaves a thrilling account and narrative of the history of Hennepin county the townships and especially the city of Minneapolis      The School Journal ,1902
