Ethel Irene Sloan,1917      Seventeenth Century English Minor Poets Richard Wilbur,1964      Seventeenth Century English Minor Poets Selected, with an introduction and notes, by Anne D.Ferry Anne Ferry,1964      Minor poets of the 17th century ,1931      Minor Poets of the Seventeenth Century Rg Howarth,2006-11-01 MINOR POETS OF THE SEVENTEENTH CENTURYEDITED BY R G HOWATHProfessor of English Literature in the University of Cape TownINTRODUCTION THE poets of the seventeenth century excluding Milton may be broadly divided into three groups those who cling to the ideals of a past age those who are influenced by modern revolutionary example and those who look forward to the poetry of the future They are the Spenserians the followers of Jonson and Donne and the transitional or early Augustan poets Of the first class the chief representatives are Giles and Phineas Fletcher William Browne and George Wither The second group may be subdivided into Cavalier lyrists and sacred poets the former holding mainly from Jonson the latter deriving from Donne Hernck Carew Suckling and Lovelace are the bestknown Cavaliers and George Herbert Vaughan Crashaw and Traherne the leading divine poets Among the first consistent users of the heroic couplet the writers of smooth verse Waller must be counted foremost with Cowley Denham and D'Avenant as the other prominent members of his group One class does not necessarily exclude another but the divisions are at least historical and form a better means of distinguishing the poets than by reckoning all or almost all as Metaphysicals The truth is that the term metaphysical does not sufficiently and finally characterize the poets of the time the metaphysical style established if not introduced by Donne is more a potent influence to which most in varying degrees succumb than the elite guiding principle and source of their art Plainly the distinctive character of the century in poetry must be looked for in the work of the second group who are neither retrospective nor futurist Here it is possible to see the religious poetry and the courtly poetry of love as merely two sides of the same Aristotelian nature strains are not sharply divided as they intermingle or Alternately hold sway in the same man and the same volume One half of Donne's poetry is expression of the love of woman the other of the love of God Ben Jonson whose best lyrics are of love is also the author of a series of divine poems Henry Carew Waller Herbert of Cherbury Habington and John Hall again pay their dues to the two compelling powers Then among the devotional poems of Crashaw Vaughan and Herbert are to be found lyrics of love Yet there was more than mere interweaving Love poetry and poetry of religion sprang often from a common basis of inspiration Thus from The Song of Solomon is derived not only the imagery of one of Carew's most voluptuous poems The Complement but also that of one of Vaughan's most sublime religious lyrics The Night Donne's questings in love are powerfully illuminated by reference to the divine learning of his time In the Platonism which runs through English poetry from Spenser to Henry More this harmonizing of apparently different elements the reconciliation of religion and earthly love is supremely accomplished      Minor Poets of the 17th Century Robert Guy Howarth, 1951      17th
