The background of the cover is a photograph of a large, modern conference room. A long, polished wooden table is the central focus, surrounded by several leather-upholstered chairs. On the table, there is a centerpiece of greenery. The room has a warm, orange-toned lighting, and the walls are decorated with abstract art. The ceiling features a large, dark, geometric structure with recessed lights.

Leaders and Choosing to Lead Douglas Board, 2016-05-23 Some of the worst selection practices to be found anywhere can be found at the top of organisations Even when senior selection is not egregiously bad rarely is it as good as it could be Front line staff and middle managers are selected with much more rigour today than 30 years ago but not the chairmen chief executives and chief officers who lead them So says Douglas Board in Choosing Leaders and Choosing to Lead Dr Board draws on his extensive experience in executive search and in leadership coupled with his own academic research embracing the sociology and psychology of scholars such as Pierre Bourdieu and Karl Weick to offer ground breaking insight into the value and limitations of established selection practice This book illuminates ways in which senior roles differ from other positions and will help those charged with selecting individuals for senior positions as well as potential candidates those concerned with regulating selection policy and researchers Examining the classic mix of competency frameworks and selection tools such as psychological and skills assessments simulations reference checking and interviews the author concludes that senior selection choices are holding back organisations and individual careers with implications for diversity effectiveness and social justice He contends that while complacent self regarding elites will always need vigilant challenge the scientific approach to selection has weaknesses as well as strengths Those weaknesses become more pronounced at senior levels posing particular questions about amongst other things the role of intuition and politics The Fractional

House of Commons: Public Administration Select Committee, 2013-09-06 The Public Administration Select Committee PASC has concluded a year long inquiry into the future of the Civil Service with only one recommendation that Parliament should establish a Joint Committee of both Houses to sit as a Commission on the future of the Civil Service It should be constituted within the next few months and report before the end of the Parliament with a comprehensive change programme for Whitehall with a timetable to be implemented over the lifetime of the next Parliament The Report considers the increased tensions between ministers and officials which have become widely reported and places the problems in Whitehall in a wider context of a Civil Service built on the Northcote Trevelyan settlement established in 1853 and the Haldane principles of ministerial accountability set out in 1919 The government's Civil Service Reform Plan lacks strategic coherence and clear leadership from a united team of ministers and officials The Northcote Trevelyan Civil Service remains the most effective way of supporting the democratically elected Government and future administrations in the UK Divided leadership and confused accountabilities in Whitehall have led to problems a low level of engagement amongst civil servants in some departments and agencies and a general lack of trust and openness the Civil Service exhibits the key characteristics of a failing organisation with the leadership are in denial about the scale of the challenge they face There is a persistent lack of key skills and capabilities across Whitehall and an unacceptably high level of churn of lead officials which is incompatible with good government
