Making Decisions:

Primer on Decision Making James G. March, 1994-05-23 Building on lecture notes from his acclaimed course at Stanford University James March provides a brilliant introduction to decision making a central human activity fundamental to individual group organizational and societal life March draws on research from all the disciplines of social and behavioral science to show decision making in its broadest context By emphasizing how decisions are actually made as opposed to how they should be made he enables those involved in the process to understand it both as observers and as participants March sheds new light on the decision making process by delineating four deep issues that persistently divide students of decision making Are decisions based on rational choices involving preferences and expected consequences or on rules that are appropriate to the identity of the decision maker and the situation Is decision making a consistent clear process or one characterized by ambiguity and inconsistency Is decision making significant primarily for its outcomes or for the individual and social meanings it creates and sustains And finally are the outcomes of decision processes attributable solely to the actions of individuals or to the combined influence of interacting individuals organizations and societies March's observations on how intelligence is or is not achieved through decision making and possibilities for enhancing decision intelligence are also provided March explains key concepts of vital importance to students of decision making and decision makers such as limited rationality history dependent rules and ambiguity and weaves these ideas into a full depiction of decision making He includes a discussion of the modern aspects of several classic issues underlying these concepts such as the relation between reason and ignorance intentionality and fate and meaning and interpretation This valuable textbook by one of the seminal figures in the history of organizational decision making will be required reading for a new generation of scholars managers and other decision makers

Making Decisions That Matter Kathleen M. Galotti, 2005-08-22 Researchers studying decision making have traditionally studied the phenomenon in the laboratory with hypothetical decisions that may or may not involve the decision maker's values passions or areas of expertise The assumption is that the findings of these well controlled laboratory studies will shed light on the important decisions people make in their everyday lives This book examines that assumption The volume begins by covering four basic phases of decision making setting or clarifying goals gathering information structuring the decision and making a final choice Comprehensive reviews of existing literature on each of these topics is provided Next the author examines differences in decision making as a function of several factors not typically discussed in the literature the type of decision being made e.g. legal medical moral and the existence of individual differences in the decision maker developmental differences individual differences in style or temperament differences as a function of expertise The author then examines the topic of group decision making contrasting it with individual decision making The volume concludes with some observations and suggestions for improving people's everyday decision making This book is intended for use as a core textbook or supplement for courses in psychology education or allied disciplines It will also be an invaluable resource for people who work with people making decisions in various applied settings such as schools universities and health care centers
