Making Meaning With Texts:

Making Meaning with Texts Louise Michelle Rosenblatt,2005 This book brings together some of Rosenblatt's most important work essays from the 1930s through the 1990s that explore the breadth and depth of her theory Making Meaning with Readers and Texts Christi U. Edge,2022-11-18 Connecting the constructs of meaning and experience in the fields of English education teacher education literacy and narrative inquiry Making Meaning with Readers and Texts broadens understandings of teachers use of literacy practices for making meaning from classroom events Making Meaning with "Readers" and "Texts" Christi Underwood Edge,2011 It focuses on the connections between the participants and the researcher's meaning making and demonstrates that 1 story connected a narrative mode of reasoning Bruner 1986 to a transactional paradigm Dewey Rosenblatt 1978 1994 2005 and created a space in which each made meaning from experiences 2 making connections through stories reflected and aided an understanding of self others and professional milieus 3 stories demonstrated how meaning making was guided by an individual's reservoir of prior experiences knowledge and language 4 stories revealed how each meaning maker referred to prior meanings made from touchstone events to guide her decision making ongoing meaning making of experiences and sense of self and 5 stories demonstrated that as each meaning maker read she attended to both efferent and aesthetic meanings yet each read interpreted and composed experiences as texts from her dominant stance or orientation toward those experiences Meaning making was a continuous construction of a conceptual text simultaneously read and composed in situational context guided by an individual's reservoir of knowledge experiences and language and used for both framing a point of reference from which additional understanding was sought and a point of departure through which exploration and discovery was initiated Making Meaning with Readers and Texts Christi U.
