A Mixed Methods Exploratory Study of Digital Literacies in Higher Education Susan K. Shannon, 2017. This exploratory study examines the assessment of digital literacy in higher education using Kurtz and Peled's 2016 digital literacy framework and assessment instrument. As information and communications technologies have grown over the last part of the 20th century and the first part of the 21st century, so has the socio-cultural environment. Kurtz and Roxin (2014b) demonstrated digital literacies complexity and presented an additional relevant category: emotion, extending Kurtz and Peled's quantitative assessment. A synthesis of the quantitative and qualitative components extended the independent results, providing a detailed assessment of first-year students' digital literacy. This detailed assessment supported a prioritization of the DLDs informing Messiah College of areas where additional programming may help support and improve students' digital literacies. A Collaborative Self-Study in Digital Literacy in Teacher Education Patrice R. LeBlanc, Jason Karp, 2016. This paper described the journey the authors took as teacher educators to improve their practice in digital literacy. The focus of the journey was to document the how-to of the development and integration of digital literacy into courses, and the method was collaborative self-study. The sources of data were ongoing technology training, i.e. training wiki and recordings, integration of digital literacy into courses, i.e. applications of readings and training and collaborations, and co-reflections on the entire process, i.e. phone conversations, video conferencing, and email. Craig's (2009) five exemplars addressed trustworthiness. Literature synthesis and training experiences described how the authors developed their knowledge and skills while a detailed example of digital literacy integration and their co-reflections explicated both successes and new directions for innovation in practice. Specifically, the literature review informed the decision-making processes for digital literacy integration. Co-reflection enabled the authors to identify a convergence of concepts from the literature: social practices and interactive pedagogy aligned with the learning needs of today's students. Digital literacy training addressed the needed functional skills each author had identified for himself or herself, as well as reaffirming the need for ongoing professional development. The authors reaffirmed the notion that mutual rapport, trust, and accountability created a learning zone where they were able to construct a deeper understanding of their practice than individual self-reflection would have done. Finally, by describing one area of digital literacy integration, the authors contributed to the literature on the process of digital literacy.

integration in teacher education Through this collaborative self study the authors documented how they a used their knowledge and skills to make decisions about the use of technology b reaffirmed the use of interactive pedagogy for digital literacy integration and c confirmed the importance of collaboration and co reflection for reframing practice The authors identified the following areas for continued growth The authors need to a be more aware of how teaching philosophy can constrain practice b share with students their instructional choices they made to promote students growth and c seek structured feedback from students in order to better understand the outcomes of digital literacy integration Contains one table
