Making Histories In Museums:

Making Histories in Museums Gaynor Kavanagh,1996 Examines museological features and historiographical issues within specific fields of study using case studies and highlighting good practice Making Histories in Museums Gaynor Kavanagh,2005-12-01 This exciting new series recognizes the tremendous potential of museum based histories and the ways in which they can engage people with ideas about the past People encounter and use museums on many different levels personal social and intellectual and access meanings that best fit their agendas Histories in museums can stimulate the imagination provoke discussion and increase our ability to question what we know From this it can be deduced that history in museums is as much about the present as it is about the past as much about how we feel as about what we know as much about who we are as about who we have been The first volume in the series Making Histories in Museums examines museological features but deals particularly with the historiographical issues that have previously been underplayed Each contributor looks at theoretical frameworks within a specific field of study using case studies and comparisons of practice Good practice is highlighted and potential ways forward explored The book establishes the themes that will be the subject of more detailed study in later volumes This series will prove an invaluable resource for all those concerned with or interested in museums museum professionals museum students historians and students of history as well as the general reader

Making City Histories in Museums Gaynor Kavanagh,Elizabeth Frostick,1998 Museums are city phenomenon one element within a suite of cultural institutions which most major urban centres support However museums now have a very different agenda from the time of their establishment in the nineteenth century While the majority of cities have museums dedicated to exploring the city itself the approach and range of interests vary enormously What these museums have in common is a commitment to construct or propose an appropriate image of the city which can be engaged with by a broad spectrum of people The contributors consider the making of city histories from very different perspectives and within a number of theoretical frameworks They use case studies and comparisons of practice In particular good practice is highlighted and potential ways forward explored Making Early Histories in Museums Nick Merriman,1999 This text examines the debate about interpretation and making history in the context of archaeological museums the reliance of those working on the early periods of the past on the fragmentary information provided by archaeology as well as an imperfect documentary record brings its own interpretative challenges While much has been written in the context of archaeological theory about the partiality and subjectivity of archaeologists interpretations of the past less has been written about the implications of this for the interpretations of archaeology by a non specialist audience in museums As a result the past presented in archaeological museums has tended to follow a traditional and uncritical model Making Histories in Transport Museums Colin Divall,Andrew Scott,2001-12-20 This book is the first in 30 years to take transport museums seriously as vehicles for the making of public histories Drawing upon many years experience of visiting and working in transport museums around the world the authors argue that the sector's historical roots are more complex than is usually thought. Written from a multidisciplinary perspective but firmly rooted in the practice of making public histories this book brings the study of transport museums firmly into the mainstream of academic and professional debate Making History Tim Betz, 2023-04-15 While first person interpretation and historic crafts have long been part of the museum world current movements in the maker movement in libraries and schools have occurred mostly outside of the museum world. Instead Makerspace in Museums Hands On History in Museums and Historic Sites shows the importance of the Maker Movement for museums and historic sites and presents a roadmap to building, planning, researching and using a makerspace alongside more traditional museum programming. It calls for a revitalization of living history which can be done through makerspaces and the maker movement. Highlights include Why museums and makerspaces are a natural fit togetherWays to organize and create a makerspace in a museum of any budgetCreating a makerspace and culture of making that is inclusive and for the entirety of the communityStrategies for researching historic making techniques and adapting them to the modern worldCreating meaningful makerspace centered programming. The processes and methods explored in this book will help produce a sustainable makerspace that will help the museum or historic site that adopts it reach new audiences creating growth and new museums stakeholders. Likewise through calling for a recalibration of living history through the language of the makerspace this project calls for new approaches to living history. Thus it is a call for a disruption to the status quo and a push towards sustainable and meaningful living history Making Histories in Transport Museums Colin Divall, Andrew Scott, 2001-11-01 This book is the first in 30 years to take transport museums seriously as vehicles for the making of public histories. Drawing upon many years experience of visiting and working in transport museums around the world the authors argue that the sector's historical roots are more complex than is usually thought. Written from a multidisciplinary perspective but firmly rooted in the practice of making public histories this book brings the study of transport museums firmly into the mainstream of academic and professional debate

Tangible Things Laurel Thatcher Ulrich, Ivan Gaskell, Sara Schechner, Sarah Anne Carter, Samantha van Gerbig, 2015-02-06 Based on the rich museum collections of Harvard University Tangible Things challenges rigid distinctions between history, anthropology, science and the arts. Through 20 entertaining and inspiring case studies it demonstrates that almost any material thing when examined closely can be a link between present and past Living History Museums Scott Magelssen, 2007-02 Living history museums are cultural institutions that merge historical exhibits with live costumed performance. While unique and vitally important they often compromise historical accuracy and authenticity for the sake of tourism and entertainment value. Many also pursue methods of performance and historiography that are becoming increasingly outdated. Living History Museums Undoing History Through Performance examines the performance practices used by institutions such as Plimoth Plantation and Colonial Williamsburg and offers a new genealogy of living history museum performance in the U.S. and Europe. Currently existing scholarship on living history museums addresses the subject from a museum studies or anthropology perspective Author Scott Magelssen however approaches the material from a background in theatre history and theory analyzing living history museums using postmodern methodology Considering performance as a method for the study of history and exploring emergent non traditional theatrical practices the book offers suggestions for performance in an increasingly postmodern landscape Concluding with an international listing of living history institutions and a complete list of sources Living History Museums is a valuable resource for students and teachers of theatre and performance studies cultural studies folklore popular culture American studies and museum studies
