Britain Arlene C. Palmer, 1996-09-01 New Britain Connecticut is a city that almost didn't exist. In the mid 1750s the settlers in this area separated from Kensington and founded the parish of New Britain with the establishment of the First Church. It was 1850 before parishioners incorporated as a town. Within twenty years the town flourished and New Britain applied for and received a city charter. The people of New Britain then voted to incorporate as a city but the historic motion passed only by the narrow margin of one vote. In this fascinating visual history city historian Arlene C. Palmer examines the 125 year history of the Hardware City through rare photographs highlighting workplaces treasured clubs and societies favorite forms of entertainment places of worship and men and women who have boldly served their city and country. The cultural diversity and rich heritage of the city's families are also evident in the book's vivid pictures and informative text.

History of New Britain, with Sketches of Farmington and Berlin, 1640-1889 David N. Camp, 1994-11-01 New Britain G. A.

Ellis, 1820 New Britain Arlene C. Palmer, 1999-08 As the millennium approaches New Britain residents have an additional reason to celebrate. The Year 2000 marks New Britain's Sesquicentennial anniversary of its incorporation as a town. The year of its founding 1850 was indeed a pivotal year for this manufacturing hub located in the middle of Connecticut. New Britain was once a rural area dotted with blacksmith shops and mills but quickly evolved into a thriving manufacturing center. The din of factory whistles and the continuous flow of the varied accents of immigrants soon enlivened this sleepy little town. New Britain's rise in the manufacturing world is surprising as the town is less than 14 square miles in size and originally had no large natural body of water nor a railroad running through it However New Britain came to be one of the most important manufacturing centers in the country    New Britain G. A.
