produced by practicing women doctors like Mary Scharlieb illustrate the relationship between medical progress and colonialism. They also helped support women's medical education in Britain and the colonies of India and the Middle East. Colonial subjects themselves produced texts in response to colonial and medical reform and Hassan shows that a number of New Indian women including Krupabai Satthianadhan participated actively in the public sphere through their involvement in health reform. In her epilogue Hassan considers the continuing tradition of women's autobiographical narrative inspired by travel and medical knowledge showing that in the twentieth and twenty-first century memoirs of South Asian and Middle Eastern women doctors the problem of the Woman Question as shaped by medical discourses endures.
