

MAN & MACHINE CHARTS

- The operator and the machine work intermittently on some types of work.
- Thus, the machine is idle while the operator loads it and while he or she removes the finished work from it, and the worker is idle while the machine is in operation.
- It is desirable to eliminate idle time for the worker, but it is equally important that the machine be kept operating at near capacity as possible.
- The first step in eliminating unnecessary waiting time for the operator and for the machine is to record exactly when each works and when each does. Such a record is called a man & machine chart. Many operations consist of three main steps:
 - a. set (work) such as putting material in the machine;
 - b. do (doing the work) such as drilling a hole;
 - c. clearing (for an operation to be completed or "idle")
- They often a clearer picture of the relationship of the operator's working time and the machine time can be obtained by showing the information graphically in such
