Managing Community Growth, 1997 Managing Community Growth Eric Kelly, 2004-12-30 Despite roughly thirty years of experience with growth management programs which are basically land use planning tools most U S communities do not plan for how best to limit or manage rapid growth in fact most communities do not plan at all In the absence of planning land use boards regulators and other governing bodies simply react to initiatives from the private sector The result is predictably haphazard and does not allow communities to achieve such goals as protecting quality of life attracting certain types of businesses while discouraging others conserving wildlife or preserving open spaces and so forth In contrast planning by managing growth can help a town or city achieve any number of goals But it is a complex task This book brings the benefit of state and local experiences with growth management to researchers students and particularly practitioners who seek guidance in these matters Kelly provides a much needed context from which any community can answer the following questions Does growth management work Is it appropriate for the community and the particular problems that it is trying to address Is one type of growth management program more appropriate than another for our community Will the program in question have undesirable or desirable side effects What are the likely effects of adopting no growth management program at all This work is invaluable for the citizen volunteers who sit on land use boards including planning and zoning commissions conservation commissions and inland wetlands agencies In addition it can aid mayors city managers and city councils in interviewing and selecting candidates for town planner Managing Community Growth and Change: Directory of federal data sources and overview of state data needs and activities in growth management, 1992

Managing Growth Timothy Beatley, David J. Brower, Lou Ann Brower, 1988 Managing Community Growth and Change, 1992

Sharing the City John Abbott, 2013-11-05 While the rate of urbanisation in the developing world has increased dramatically over the past 20 years governments capacity to support urban growth has in many cases failed to keep up with this trend Non governmental organisations working in the field have long advocated community management of the urban environment as the best solution to this problem and there is now a growing consensus that the answer does indeed lie with local communities Yet there is still little understanding of what constitutes meaningful and effective community participation or how it may be achieved in such a complex operating environment Sharing the City gives a comprehensive account of urban community participation both in theory and practice It first presents a wide ranging analysis of the issues and develops a participatory framework for urban management Using case studies and existing examples from around the world and drawing on lessons learned from previous experience it then develops the theory into a practical working model Effective participatory urban management calls for a fundamental rethink on the part of all the actors involved from local authorities and development agencies through local and international NGOs to the community based organisations and the communities themselves In redefining their roles and relationships Sharing the City presents a new and radically different yet viable and effective approach to the concept of urban management
