Managers And Magic:

Managers and Magic Graham Cleverley, 1971 Technology as Magic Richard Stivers, Peter Stirk, 2001-08-01 What gives the mass media particularly advertising and television their extraordinary power over our lives so that even the most jaded and sophisticated among us are troubled and fascinated by their allure The secret according to Richard Stivers in this brilliant new book lies in the curious relationship between technology and magic Stivers argues the two are now related to one another in such a way that each has taken on important characteristics of the other His contention is that our expectations for technology have become magical to the point that they have generated a multitude of imitation technologies that function as magical practices These imitation technologies flourish in the fields of psychology management administration and the mass media and their paramount purpose in human adjustment and control Advertising and television programs in particular contain the key magical rituals of our civilization In a fascinating analysis of television programming Stivers shows how various genres news sports game shows soap operas sitcoms etc have their distinct mythological symbols Through dramatized information they symbolically connect consumer goods and services to desired outcomes the utopian goals of success happiness and health thus enveloping technology both real and imitation in a magical cocoon

Controversies in Management Alan B Thomas, 2005-07-25 As managerial roles diversify the phenomenon of management becomes increasingly puzzling Demand for formal management training theories and qualifications has increased yet our ability to think critically about management has diminished At a time of organizational and environmental turbulence the question of effective management is more complex than ever Unpicking the puzzles faced by both the manager and the student of management this introductory guide explores the major issues of management organization and knowledge asking questions of our guru culture and raising debates on so called expert thinking Written from the viewpoint that the most effective managers are those that can think for themselves and put aside the advice of the management guru it is a topical challenging and thought provoking study Thoroughly revised and reorganized this second edition features two completely new chapters that cover gender issues in management debates on globalization post modernity and the future of management Designed to bring readers into the debate rather than simply providing a framework of answers this new edition also includes an orientation questionnaire discussion questions for each area covered and further reading suggestions

Nicole Gaiziunas, 2013-11-11 Every executive board would like to have the best in their field Unfortunately this undertaking has been failing extensively and categorically for years Every year billions are spent on executive and personnel development talent management training and qualification with modest results No man agers can move mountains like this not to mention the range of challenges which are mounting up in this time of exogenous shocks threatened global supply networks and dwindling raw material sources The input principle is to blame Too much emphasis is placed on what is put in The best in class pay attention to what comes out They work according to the principle of return Training should no longer just make it possible for managers and employees to move mountains The mountains need to be moved in the training itself This is self financing and profit generating because it creates return projects which are designed to increase turnover reduce costs and or improve efficiency That s how mountains are moved With this new understanding of management development and the unleashed power of developing personalities In short with future competence The author spotlights twelve megatrends from business and society that managers across all industries will need to master with future competence in the next few years They lead in to Change Management 2 0 Transformation instead of just change
