New World Microenterprise Fin Pb:

When There Was No Money Heather A. Clark, 2006-03-14 The challenges in development often seem insurmountable. They overwhelm nations and the builders of their most basic institutions. I am often asked how development finance agencies can work together to meet this challenge. In reply, I invite you to read a story about cooperation in rebuilding one of the most basic institutions of any society: the banking system. KfW Bankengruppe places great emphasis on financial sector development. Our experience in our own country and beyond our borders shows that one of the first steps is building a banking system that fuels growth through investment in enterprises. Micro, small and medium enterprises are the backbone of many economies; they are also the wealth of the people and generate their hope in the future. We believe that the depth of the financial sector is related to economic growth: the growth and safety of deposits, the facility of payments and the invitation to develop new products and services that strengthen markets and promote investment. A strong banking system supports economic growth by attracting unproductive capital and injecting it into the economy, increasing the productivity of the country's capital base and leveraging it by attracting outside capital.

Microcredit and Poverty Alleviation Tazul Islam, 2016-04-22 The attempt of the Grameen Bank to alleviate poverty and enhance the skills and productivity of its rural women clients provides the fascinating backdrop to this important study of micro credit institutions. Tazul Islam examines the real extent to which the Grameen Bank's credit alone policy has been successful in securing the Bank's financial sustainability, its practical role in alleviating poverty and its actual impact on the productivity of its clients. This book concludes by considering alternative policy options that hold out the possibility of increased poverty alleviation.

Commercialization of Microfinance Stephanie Charitonenco, Ismah Afwan, 2003 This study is the fourth of a series of publications resulting from a regional technical assistance project on commercialization of microfinance. The series comprises four country reports on Bangladesh, Indonesia, Philippines and Sri Lanka and a regional report on perspectives on commercialization from South and Southeast Asia. This report analyzes the progress toward commercialization of Indonesia's highly diversified and predominantly formal microfinance industry, explores the implications of commercialization and the remaining challenges to expanding outreach on a sustainable basis, recommends positive approaches to the expansion of commercial microfinance while preserving the traditional social objective of MFIs of expanding access of the poor to demand-driven sustainable financial services.

Commercialization of Microfinance, Bangladesh Stephanie Charitonenco, S. M. Rahman, 2002 Analyzing the progress toward commercialization made in Bangladesh's relatively developed and competitive microfinance industry, this report explores the challenges and implications for various types of stakeholders. Recommendations for positive approaches to improve commercialization of microfinance while preserving the social objectives of microfinance institutions are covered in detail.

Microfinance and Women's Empowerment in Bangladesh Faraha Nawaz, 2019-03-01 This book examines the effects of policies and practices of microfinance NGOs in empowering rural women in Bangladesh. Nawaz seeks to unpack the untold narratives of women's empowerment and to fill the current knowledge gap in this area. The book goes beyond the narrow minimalist evaluation of microfinance that only focuses on women's economic empowerment through their ability to access financial resources. Rather, it looks at whether and how microfinance empowers women in a holistic manner across the socio-cultural, psychological, and political spheres of life. The author argues that microfinance reduces levels of poverty, which means that women are better able to meet their practical gender needs; however, they are not empowered unless they are also able to meet their strategic gender needs, including the transformation of gender power relations from the household to state arenas. Therefore, the book argues that in order to bring about higher levels of empowerment, microfinance programs must be combined with other services such as financial literacy, socioeconomic training, education, healthcare, social mobilization, and legal support. Microfinance and Women's Empowerment in Bangladesh will be of interest to students and scholars across a range of disciplines, including Gender Studies, Development Studies, and Politics.

Social Reinsurance

David M. Dror, Alexander S. Preker, 2002. Annotation: This volume views community-based microinsurance as an incremental first step to improved financial protection and better access to health services for the poor. While community-based financing can be structured in various ways, this volume focuses on reinsurance as a mechanism for improving micro-level health insurance units. It outlines strategies and policies that can be applied by countries and donors to improve access to health care services.

Assisting Development in a Changing World Dwight Heald Perkins, 1997. For over forty years, the Harvard Institute for International Development (HIID) has worked with countries in the developing world on the complex issues of economic and social reform. This volume describes the experience of the Institute in the challenging development assistance world of the 1980s and early 1990s, when HIID's largest projects involved work with countries attempting to move away from high levels of government intervention to more market-friendly systems. These efforts involved work in formerly centrally planned command economies (e.g., Russia, Vietnam, etc.) as well as in the mixed-plan market economies of Asia, Africa, and Latin America. The book also describes HIID's efforts in education and health reform, as well as in the rapidly expanding area of environmental economics and policy. Assisting Development in a Changing World is an unvarnished account written by the HIID practitioners who participated in these programs and edited by its former director and executive directors.

Journal for studies in economics and econometrics, 2006 The New World of Microenterprise Finance María Otero, Elisabeth Rhyne, 1994. Introducing a new direction for microenterprise finance, contributors argue that one can create sustainable and viable financial institutions that give the poor greater access to financial services. Covering Asia, Africa, and Latin America, the cases outline successful programs such as the Bank Rakyat Indonesia, BRI, BancoSol in Bolivia, the Association of Solidarity Groups in Colombia, and the Kenya Rural Enterprise Programme.
