Another Newfoundland Scoff Dale Wilson, 2003 For centuries the land and sea have forged the people of this vast land known as Newfoundland and Labrador From the earliest inhabitants ten thousand years ago to the most recent generation of European descendants the table fare has primarily evolved from what was readily available The food of this easternmost province reflects the land and the people who live on it hearty solid and down to earth and Wilson has managed to marry the two marvellously with revealing imagery The twenty three landscape photographs invoke a sense of place and tantalize the palate with a full spectrum More than twenty five recipes several with accompanying photographs whet the appetite and let us revel This is a unique recipe book bound to complement the coffee table or kitchen and is as colourful as the people who inspired it
