Hagley,Karen Rohrer,Michael Gehrling,2020-06-30 Sustaining Grace explores the dynamic between new faith communities and denominational systems through the lens of stewardship and sustainability As a collection these essays suggest that to facilitate ecologies for innovation in our current era established congregations and new faith communities must model the sustaining grace of God to one another in creative ways Thus problems of sustainability are not for church planters to solve alone but rather are related to the theologies of stewardship and the ecclesial system to which they belong Issues of vision are not for denominational systems to theorize alone but are given shape on their historic foundations in the creative and prophetic structures practiced in new faith communities This book speaks to a central tension in the growing movement of church planting the mutual need of and the mutual frustration between establishment leaders and innovators conservators and risk takers Standing at the contact point of that tension in one of the wealthiest mainline denominations 1001 New Worshipping Communities and Pittsburgh Theological Seminary engage the question of faithful stewardship with voices reflecting and strategizing on each side of the tension broadening the conversation to include those beyond the Presbyterian Church and bringing both the academy and practitioners from church judicatories church plants and traditional church communities to offer a theologically grounded practical and generative conversation Creating New Life: Forming New Faith Communities Within Existing Congregational Settings Utilizing Personal Traits and Experiences ,2011

if We're Asking the Wrong Questions opens the door to a conversation about who we have been who we are now and who we can be in the future. In recent years we have experienced a decline in both membership and engagement and have struggled to sustain ourselves in a shifting and uncertain landscape. We have always relied on our history as a church to both energize our present and direct our path forward. But what if we don't just have a storied past but a new and exciting future? Rather than relying on failing strategies, strategies that have not turned our diminishing communities of faith around, what if we work towards a new practice? Through a series of self-examining questions, Kjellberg leads the reader through a process of deep reflection and creative inspiration. He asks us to examine our preset beliefs about who we are and what we believe and explore a new way of being church. This is not easy work and Kjellberg encourages us to express the full range of our doubts, fears, and sorrows. But rather than mourning where we are now, what if the mystery of the future is what inspires our present? Can we find that new path forward without letting fear of loss block our way? Imagining A New Church challenges us to ask ourselves a new set of questions, freeing us from the need to recover to a place of imagining something new. We want our church and our faith to be both relevant and responsive to a changing and needful world. Our confounding present is just one stop on our pilgrimage into a hopeful future. This process of doing and undoing, making and unmaking, is challenging. But in our love for our church we can find the strength to forge a new way, a new path. The future can be one of hope and creation rather than a time of sadness, darkness, and loss. Jeffrey Kjellberg's Imagining a New Church is a bright lantern on this journey.

Divergent Church Tim Shapiro, Kara Faris, 2017-10-17

New faith communities are appearing across the U.S. Many of them bear little resemblance on the surface to church in its conventional form. But when we look a little deeper we see striking continuity with the most deeply rooted practices of the Christian faith in community. What are those practices? What do these unconventional alternative faith communities look like? How are they perhaps indicators of a hopeful new future for the church? And what can we learn from them? Authors Kara Brinkerhoff and Tim Shapiro spent more than a year researching and exploring these questions, closely examining the life of a dozen alternative faith communities across the country. They include new monastic communities, food-oriented communities, affinity group communities, house churches, hybrid churches, and others. They are creative, ingenious, innovative, clever, dynamic, and transformative. But they represent human expressions of activities that have always been part of human religious congregations: hospitality, learning, storytelling, care, leadership, worship, and honoring place. This fascinating book goes beyond simply analyzing current trends. It reveals how innovative Christians are engaging in time-honored practices, creating new types of communities which will shape the church to come. Further, it shows us how we too might innovate while holding true to the essential practices of our gathered faith. This is an instructive picture of Christian community past, present, and future.

A New Kind of Big Chip Sweeney,Kitti Murray,2011-01-01 There s a growing desire among believers to reach beyond the walls of their churches to impact communities for God But when the average church size hovers around 150 members and the problems of even midsized cities seem insurmountable how can we hope to make a difference A New Kind of Big tells the inspiring story of how Perimeter Church in suburban Atlanta started a partnership called Unite with other area churches in order to increase its reach in a community that desperately needed God s light and aid This partnership has grown to a network of nearly 150 churches that are bringing kingdom transformation to Atlanta For instance on just one weekend in 2007 6 000 volunteers from over 60 churches in metro Atlanta gathered to work on 250 service projects inside the ten mile radius around Perimeter Church Thirty welcome baskets were delivered to refugees a dozen homes were repaired a thousand Bibles were given away 750 encourage a teacher gift bags were distributed And that s not all volunteers orchestrated 20 block parties in low income apartment communities and 65 neighborhood food drives that collected 25 000 pounds of food Chip Sweeney shows Christian leaders how they too can discover the power of this new kind of big to pool their resources energy and time to minister to their communities no matter how long or short their membership rolls

Turning Ourselves Inside Out Russell Daye,Robert C. Fennell,2021-09-14

Turning Ourselves Inside Out emerges from the Thriving Christian Communities Project started by the authors in 2015 as well as from a Facebook conversation where someone asked We always hear about the problems in our churches When are we going to talk about the good news stories This got the authors thinking How do we learn about what is exciting and what the Holy Spirit is doing How do we broaden the conversation beyond how sad afraid and grumpy we often are as church people These kinds of questions filled the authors imaginations as they scouted out the long walking route of Camino Nova Scotia the pilgrimage program offered by Atlantic School of Theology The long hours walking together gave them space and peace to think more broadly about what they wanted to learn and how to share it with the wider church In interviews with thirty five faith communities the authors discovered that amid great upheaval Christ is giving us a new church and this book offers readers a firsthand glimpse of it Turning Ourselves Inside Out isn't an off the shelf program or model It invites readers to listen to others experiences and then dig deep into their own and get down to the business of dreaming God's dream and making it real right where they are Leaders of congregations and all who care about what God is up to in the world need to hear these stories They are a source of hope and courage as God renews and revives God's people
