Ngos In The Changing Scenario:

NGOs in the Changing Scenario Meher C. Nanavatty, P. D. Kulkarni, 1998-01-01 NGOs in Development Perspective R. B. Jain, 1995 Book is outcome of a seminar organized by the International Political Science Association's Research Committee on Public Bureaucracies in Developing Societies in collaboration with the Friedrich Ebert Stiftung New Delhi The Management of Non-Governmental Development Organizations David Lewis, 2006-12-11 The first edition of this book was published in 2001 by Routledge and was the first academic text on the important new emerging field of NGO management. It sets out the field for researchers with a new and original conceptual framework, contains a comprehensive review of existing literature from a variety of disciplines including management, development studies and social policy, and provides wide ranging examples from the author's own practical and research experience. New to this edition: twelve new detailed case studies of NGO management issues and challenges; new discussion points, lessons learned and questions for debate to guide the reader through each chapter; definitions of key terms; highlighted key ideas to illustrate each chapter. Revealing the distinctive organizational challenges faced by NGOs, this second edition provides a fully updated and revised text that will prove invaluable to all those studying or working in NGOs, the voluntary sector or development studies. Visit the Companion website at www.routledge.com/textbooks/9780415370936 Scenario Thinking G. Wright, G. Cairns, 2011-05-03 Presents new methods in scenario thinking based on a mix of high level research and top level consultancy experience. The authors describe the logical bases of a range of scenario methods and provide detailed road maps on how to implement them together with practical examples of their application Civil Society, NGOs and Democratic Governance in developing countries. A case of KHRC in Kenya Timothy Mugo, 2018-05-17 Master's Thesis from the year 2014 in the subject Politics Topic Development Politics grade 7 University of Aarhus Institute of Culture and Society course International Relations language English abstract Scholars agree that modern political democracies are almost impossible without vibrant free and activist civil societies. In Africa as in many other parts of the developing world, civil societies have arisen as a response to the dysfunction and despotism of the postcolonial state. Given the current political developments in Kenya, including a new constitution promulgated in August 2010 that has been applauded as being very progressive and with an elaborate chapter on Bills of Rights and its continuing implementation, the relatively peaceful, largely free and fair general elections of March 2013 that KHRC monitored, it can be said that the organization has positively played a positive role in the last quarter of a century, but there is still a long way to go for real democratic principles to be permanently enshrined among the Kenyan political elites and state institutions, and as such KHRC must continue on its struggle to keep the various regimes that come into power on their toes and engage them on the way towards ensuring a strong and stable Kenyan state that is deeply rooted in democratic governance and that has accountability, transparency and respect for human rights. This thesis therefore seeks to examine how civil society represented in this case study by KHRC have contributed to the increased democratic space in Kenya and therefore be able to conclude whether civil society and NGOs contribute to democratization and democratic governance within the state. Scholars agree that modern political democracies are almost impossible without vibrant free and activist civil societies. In Africa as in many other parts of the developing world, civil societies have arisen as a response to the dysfunction and despotism of the postcolonial state. Improving Natural Resource Management Timothy C. Haas, 2011-01-13. The decision to implement environmental protection options is a political one. These and other political and social decisions affect the balance of the ecosystem and how the point of equilibrium desired is to be reached. This book develops a stochastic temporal model of how political processes influence and are influenced by ecosystem processes and looks at how to find the most politically feasible plan for managing an at risk ecosystem. Finding such a plan is accomplished by first fitting a mechanistic political and ecological model to a data set composed of observations on both political actions that impact an ecosystem and variables that describe the ecosystem. The parameters of this fitted model are perturbed just enough to cause human behaviour to change so that desired ecosystem states occur. This perturbed model gives the ecosystem management plan needed to reach desired ecosystem states. To construct such a set of interacting models, topics from political science, ecology, probability and statistics are developed and explored. Key features: Explores politically feasible ways to manage at risk ecosystems. Gives agent based models of how social groups affect ecosystems through time. Demonstrates how to fit models of population dynamics to mixtures of wildlife data. Presents statistical methods for fitting models of group behaviour to political action data. Supported by an accompanying website featuring datasets and JAVA code. This book will be useful to managers and analysts working in organizations charged with finding practical ways to sustain biodiversity or the physical environment. Furthermore, this book also provides a political roadmap to help lawmakers and administrators improve institutional environmental management decision making.

Grassroots NGOs by Women for Women Femida Handy, 2006-07-05. Women entrepreneurs who are they? Organizational structures: does a feminist ideology matter? Social impact: what makes for success? Conclusion. The Politics of Climate Change Knowledge Nowrin Tabassum, 2022-03-03. This book addresses political knowledge of climate change and its relation to labelling people affected by climate change either as climate refugees or as climate change induced displaced people or migrants. By questioning the knowledge of climate change and subsequent labelling of people, this book will spark debate in studies of global climate politics and transnational policy networks. Rather than considering the issue of climate change as a given phenomenon, the author explores how the politicized knowledge of climate change has been produced in international negotiations and how that knowledge is transmitted from global forums to local country levels via climate change action plans and resilience projects. This book introduces the concept of multi-scalar knowledge brokers: MKBs, individual actors who work at multiple levels: local, national and international, to transmit the knowledge of climate change from global level to local level. The author uses the primary case study of Bangladesh to demonstrate how the dominant actors in global climate politics the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change IPCC the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change UNFCCC and the World Bank as well as the USA and the UK interact with the government and local NGOs in Bangladesh regarding transmitting the knowledge of climate change labelling the uprooted people and implementing resilience projects This book will be of interest to students scholars and practitioners of international relations environmental politics climate change studies political ecology political geography and migration and displacement studies The Open Access version of this book available at www.taylorfrancis.com has been made available under a Creative Commons Attribution Non Commercial No Derivatives 4.0 license Thanks to the support of libraries working with Knowledge Unlatched www.knowledgeunlatched.org
